Army, Navy Chiefs Deny Labor Curbs Are Needed

Senate Inquirers, However, Agree Sunday Double Pay Must Be Eliminated

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Directing chiefs of the Nation's war production effort yesterday called for formulation of a National labor policy by the War Labor Board but generally backed the White House in opposition to legislative action at this time.

Four ranking officials of the War and Navy departments and the Maritime Commission appeared before a Senate Appropriations subcommittee probing into public unrest over war labor-management policies.

They agreed:

That "premium" or double pay for Saturday, Sunday or holiday work should be abolished as costly to production, but that this could probably be accomplished by voluntary agreement.

That strikes are not now seriously handicapping production and that there is public "misunderstanding" on the 40-hour week; but no legislation is needed in either case.

That there are cases of individual "loafing" and "slow down" and room for a greater production effort by both management and labor.

"We are not doing enough by a long shot yet," Lieut. Gen. William S. Knudsen, War Department director of production, told the Senate subcommittee.

Incentive Plans Urged

Knudsen urged that double pay premiums "be taken out of the picture" and that "labor organizations stop objecting to incentive plans (bonus for more work), that are to the workmen's benefit."

Others who testified were Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War; Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the Maritime Commission, and Ralph A. Bard, Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

Alone of these witnesses, Admiral Land thought that the 40-hour week should be considered "definitely in the province of Congress." Because it involves primarily the wage envelope, he said, "it must be considered in connection with inflation possibilities and general spiraling of prices."

Both Patterson and Land opposed drafting of labor for war work. Bard thought the controversial subject of the closed shop "is affecting production adversely and will continue to do so until it is settled." He believed the National War Labor Board should offer a solution through cases now pending.

House Hearings Here

Despite an almost solid Administration front against legislative action and a warning by Speaker Rayburn that the Nation needs unity rather than indignation meetings, House sponsors of legislation curbing war labor privileges and industrial profits drove forward with hearings slated this morning.

1. Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, was invited to outline objectives of the Smith-Vinson bill, limiting war profits to 6 per cent, suspending the 40-hour week and outlawing the closed shop and overtime pay

Most High Schools Adopt New Hours Starting Monday

The Board of Education yesterday unanimously approved new opening and closing hours effective Monday, for most of the District's senior and junior high schools as a means of relieving traffic congestion at peak hours.

With the exception of Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, which will continue to open at 8:15 a. m. and Brown Junior High School, which will open at 8 instead of 8:30 as now, all the other junior and senior high schools will open at 9:30 a. m. and close at 3:30 p. m.

Only schools in the city which will continue to open at 9 a. m. are the elementary schools, of whose 50,000 students less than 2,000 use the transportation system. Vocational schools and teachers colleges will continue to open at 8:30 a. m.

The new hours will remain in effect only until the close of the current school term in June.

OPA Freezes Gasoline Prices In District and 19 States

In the second gasoline conservation move within a week, the Office of Price Administration yesterday ordered filling station prices for gasoline in the District and in 19 States frozen Monday at last Friday's levels.

The order applies to the same area in which a 20 per cent curtailment in gasoline deliveries to service stations became effective at midnight last night. This order, by the War Production Board, applies to Atlantic seaboard and Pacific Northwest areas and came as a result of tanker sinkings. Maryland and Virginia are included in the area.

Regular Gas at 17.8 Cents

The price regulation period was made for 60 days. Such temporary ceilings are normally applied to cope with swiftly developing inflationary movements and in most cases are followed by permanent price orders.

Most retail gasoline in the District sells for 17.8 cents for regular and 19.8 cents for premium grade. The OPA order means the gas will remain at these price levels for 60 days.

Since the freezing order is for two months only the question of summer gasoline prices is left in the air. In normal times, gas prices go down here in the summer but continued sinking of tankers, with resultant transportation problems, could prevent this usual decline.

Violations of the price order may be punished upon conviction by a maximum fine of $5000 or imprisonment for one year, or both, Acting Price Administrator John E. Hamm warned.

As a possible additional measure to assure compliance with the price ceiling, Hamm said the OPA is giving "serious consideration" to the licensing of all filling stations in the so-called "curtailment area."

First Day of Curtailment

Under this plan any gasoline retailer violating the order would be subject to court action to have the license suspended.

Besides the District, Virginia and Maryland, the order applies to gasoline stations in Maine, Delaware, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, east of the Apalachicola River; Oregon and Washington.

The OPA said no price may be charged for any grade of motor fuel that is higher than the price that was posted for the same grade at the close of business or at 11 p. m. on March 13.

72-Hour Operation

If no price was posted, then the service station cannot charge more than the price at which it made its last sale of a similar grade of motor fuel during the 60-day period prior

House Bill Asks Registration of Women 18-65

Early Action Seen On WAAC; Similar Navy Unit Proposed

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Swift on the heels of House approval for a volunteer women's army auxiliary corps yesterday came introduction of a bill to compel registration of all women between 18 and 65 years of age and another proposing a women's navy auxiliary corps.

Representative Baldwin (Republican), of New York, asked compulsory registration to provide the country with "complete information as to the capacity and advisability of the registrant for service—civilian or military—in connection with prosecution of the war."

His measure was introduced as an amendment to the Selective Service law, but made no provision for the time and place of registration nor for a national draft lottery such as has been used to draw manpower into military services. The bill was sent to the Military Affairs Committee, where it faces an uncertain future.

Maas Proposes WNAC

Representative Maas (Republican), of Minnesota, proposed the WNAC, members of which would do noncombatant duties similar to those performed for the Army by the WAAC and would be similarly designed to free able-bodied men for actual warfare.

In the meantime Senator Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, promised to seek early Senate consideration of the WAAC measure introduced in the House by Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers—and the Army was reported to be in readiness to start receiving volunteers four weeks after Senate approval.

Actual plans for setting up the auxiliary, including the uniforming, are closely-guarded "military secrets," but it was admitted yesterday that "real and tough Army officers" will be in charge and not the comparatively new Women's Interest division of the War Department.

141 Charged With Plot to Fix Cheese Prices

88 Per Cent of U. S. Production Affected By Antitrust Action

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 18.—Two antitrust law indictments charging 141 defendants with conspiracy to fix prices on American and brick cheese were returned today by a Federal grand jury.

One indictment charged 17 corporations and 23 of their officers and agents with conspiracy to fix prices to be paid by cheese dealers to cheese producers for brick cheese sold and shipped in interstate commerce. It said the defendants controlled the production or purchase of approximately 88 per cent of the brick cheese production in the United States, amounting annually to some 34 million pounds.

How Exchange Fixed Prices

It set forth that "fictitious" prices were established for brick cheese through offers, bids and sales once a week on the Wisconsin Cheese Exchange of an "infinitesimal amount" of the total brick cheese produced.

An earlier indictment charged 101 cheese dealers, processors and distributors, including 45 corporations and 56 individuals, with conspiracy to fix prices on American cheese and cheese products to both producers and consumers.

It charged that membership in the exchange was confined solely to the defendants and that prices allegedly fixed therein were used as a base for prices to be paid by producers and to be charged distributors and consumers throughout the United States.

Also Fixed Price to Farmers

The indictment set forth that the corporate defendants handled more than 90 per cent of the total of 600 million pounds of American cheese produced each year in this country.

Four defendants—National Dairy Products Corporation, through the Kraft Cheese Co., and other subsidiaries; The Borden Co., Swift & Co., Armour & Co., and their several subsidiaries—handled approximately 70 per cent of the American cheese production, or about 420

After 97 Years

McCarran to Propose Virginia Areas Be Returned to D. C.

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, chairman of the Senate District Committee, announced last night he intends to introduce a bill to bring back to the District its original Virginia territory, which includes Arlington and a part of Alexandria.

If passed by Congress, the proposed bill would revoke the Act of 1845 whereby District land beyond the Potomac was ceded to Virginia.

His announcement followed the conclusion of hearings yesterday by a House District subcommittee on a bill sponsored by Chairman Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, which would definitely fix the boundary line at highwater mark on the Virginia shore of the river and end the controversy over jurisdiction of the Washington National Airport.

Senator McCarran declared last night that "the territory rightfully belongs in the District under Federal jurisdiction." He pointed out that extensive developments, such as the new War Department Building, are being carried out in nearby Virginia by the War and Navy Departments.

MacArthur Ran Gantlet In Speedboat

By H. R. Knickerbocker

Melbourne, Australia, March 18. Nearly 100 days after the Japanese treacherously attacked his fortress in the Philippines, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, still victorious, penetrated their lines and after seven days of adventurous travel with his wife and child and members of his staff, has arrived in Australia to take charge of a fresh attack on the enemy.

The story of his journey from the Philippines to Australia can't be told yet in its entirety, but even a sketch of it is enough to reveal drama at its best.

It starts at night in the heart of a faraway theater of war which the Japanese had already so thoroughly dominated that it became the principal miracle of this conflict that any American should still be holding out anywhere within their area.

One can visualize the blacked-out beach and the secrecy with which this little party set out to run the gantlet of the Japanese. They chose to do it in speedboats. Once loaded

Coast Shipping Must Put Into Ports at Night

By the Associated Press

New York, March 18.—Secretary of the Navy Knox said today that a considerable increase in the submarine patrol fleet along the Eastern Coast will be made within the next 60 days."

Knox said that there were harbors where ships could anchor at night, and that they had been ordered to do so. Most of the sinkings off the Atlantic Coast occurred at night, he said.

Farther south where there are no adequate harbors, he continued, ship captains had been ordered to keep their running lights out.

"These orders," he said, "have not always been obeyed, and Admiral Andrews will see that they are obeyed."

Knox made his announcement at a press conference in the public relations office of the Third Naval District after inspecting naval in-

American Ingenuity Shows Results in Girding Continent

MORE stories about Americans in Australia on Pages 2 and 3.

By Don Caswell
United Press Staff Writer

Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters in Australia, March 18.—The Yanks have taken Australia by storm.

The Australians at first were flabbergasted by the swashbuckling Americans. Now they love them and call them "fair dinkum." To the Americans, the Australians are "right guys." Both phrases mean the same.

Australia, with her own sons on other of the world's fighting fronts, has adopted the Americans to replace them.

The American uniform opens any door in Australia.

American currency long ago became legal tender all over Australia. The Americans now lay down a $1 bill and the Australian shopkeepers always give them the right change. In some of the smaller towns there are just as many greenbacks in circulation as pound notes.

Now it can be told that the first contingent of Americans arrived on December 22—15 days after Pearl Harbor.

"Damnedest Gamblers"

An Australian who witnessed the arrival said "they are the damnedest gamblers I ever saw . . . Every man seemed to have at least half a dozen packs of playing cards with him.

"Australian money doesn't mean a thing to them, so they bet big. A couple days ago I saw a private win £18 (about $64) during his lunch hour."

Those Americans were a flying contingent and the witness to their arrival said he watched their camouflaged luxury liner steam into its berth with the decks crowded with men.

"Across the water came the drummer's tattoo and the regimental band struck up such songs as "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and "Over There," he said. "Then the troops came ashore and long lines of men given liberty suddenly broke up. They spread all over the town."

Physique Impressed

A tent city sprang up overnight, he said, and cookhouses appeared, equipped with dozens of American gadgets and knickknacks. The cooks, he said, prepared hotel-like meals" aided by electric refrigerators and cookers.

"Officers and men worked like slaves, always in a tearing hurry," he said. "They preferred to do most of the work themselves. If wharf laborers did not feel like working around the clock, the Americans did. Many officers and men worked 24

Substantial Forces There in Atmosphere Of Mutual Trust

By the Associated Press

Melbourne, March 18.—Under America's finest military leadership and supported by still growing American reinforcements, Australia was being converted today into a great continental fortress from which the Allies one day intend to spring forth to reconquer the southwest Pacific.

In an atmosphere of mutual trust, liking and quiet confidence that this position would be held against the heaviest Japanese assault, three distinguished American officers took their places in the grand drama of fighting fellowship about to unfold:

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, supreme commander of all United Nations forces afield, aloft and at sea, for Australia and for all the southwest Pacific east of Singapore;

Lieut. Gen. George H. Brett, deputy to MacArthur and commander of Allied air forces in the Australia-New Zealand area.

Vice Admiral Herbert F. Leary, who already was in command of the Allied sea forces in the Anzac zone.

Curtin Gratified

Australian Prime Minister John Curtin and Army Minister Francis Forde made plain that the appointments were welcome, and the prime minister added:

"It is most gratifying that I am able to announce that there are most substantial American forces in Australia.

"These forces are not only most heartening in their actuality but in their expression of the spirit of fighting shoulder-to-shoulder that will give to the democracies decisive strength in the struggle in the Pacific and all theaters of the war."

"We recognize in Gen. MacArthur a great soldier and an inspiring leader," said Forde.

"He can be sure that every officer and man in the Australian army will work and fight under him with the utmost loyalty. The feeling of this country and government is that a better soldier than MacArthur could not have been found to lead the Anzac forces."

Organized Sports Banned

Illustrating that there is to be nothing as usual—not business as usual nor pleasure as usual—Curtin announced that racing, organized sports and even motion pictures now were out for the duration.

He gave two great tasks to his country, first to hold on and second to build up the positions for a victorious Allied counter-offensive.

"If we fail ourselves nothing can save us; we have to show ourselves worthy of aid," he said.

Action officially reported during the day was wholly in the air.

It was announced that Allied planes on Tuesday had raided the enemy-held airdrome at Koeping on Dutch Timor, at the western end of the Japanese invasion arc.

[The United Press said a communique also disclosed that Japanese planes attacked Tulagi in the

'Hell's Torture'

Aid Needed For Bataan, Sayre Warns

By the United Press

San Francisco, March 18.—Francis B. Sayre, United States high commissioner to the Philippines, arrived in San Francisco today after escaping from besieged Bataan Peninsula and urged that ships, planes and supplies be rushed to American forces there "who are going through the tortures of hell for us here in America."

He was en route to Washington to report to President Roosevelt.

"At the battlefront from which I have just come, soldiers and sailors are going through the tortures of hell," Sayre said. "They cannot possibly continue to hold the line unless we get ships and planes and supplies to them in time.

"We must match their gallantry. No sacrifice on our part of personal comfort or of special interests or privileges or even of life itself is too great."

Sayre said his return to the United States "after 2½ months of Manila and Corregidor under constant bombing and shellfire is like entering a new world."

More Nazis Trapped; Reds Peril Vyazma

By the Associated Press

Moscow, March 18.—Digging deep into the German's strongly held Vyazma pocket, the Red army tonight had encircled the Nazis' most advanced spearhead pointed at Moscow and put Hitler's great Vyazma garrison itself in a position of grave menace.

(Stockholm reports estimated that 200,000 German troops were surrounded in the Vyazma-Rhev pockets.)

The newly encircled garrison was at Gzhatsk, on the main Moscow-Minsk Railroad and highway some 35 miles northeast of Vyazma and 100 miles west of Moscow. It was to Gzhatsk that the Germans fell back after their winter disasters at Mohaisk and Borodino and since then the Germans are known to have concentrated huge forces at both Gzhatsk and Vyazma.

By such "hedgehog" tactics they have kept a constant threat pointed at the Russian capital through icy months of reverses—a fact which the Red army always has had to take into consideration in offensive operations.

Dispatches telling of the newest Red army coup did not give the date of the entrapment, but apparently it was several days ago. Tonight's communique said merely that nothing of importance had taken place at the front today. It claimed the destruction of 44 Ger-

Two more Washingtonians joined the roster of Navy heroes yesterday, and a third District officer was commended for capturing a German vessel disguised as an American merchantman.

Lieut. Albert Hobbs Clark, 30, of 4227 Fordham Road Northwest, and Lieut. Harry Eades Woodworth, 26, of 716 Allison Street Northwest, submarine officers, were awarded Silver Stars for "accomplishing an unusual, hazardous mission for the War Department in enemy-controlled waters."

Capt. Theodore E. Chandler, commanding officer of the United States Cruiser Omaha, was cited for recognizing the German motorship Odenwald last November 6, and capturing it, although the vessel

Nelson, Patterson Wield Shears And Off Goes Some Red Tape

"Red tape as usual" in the military and civilian bureaucracy received a body blow yesterday when production boss Donald M. Nelson and Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson agreed to end the long-cherished organizational monstrosity known as "layering."

"Layering," officials explained, is the process which occurs when Lieut. Smith, in Army Ordnance, wants to discuss a problem in making machine guns with Mr. Jones, who works for the War Production Board on the same matter.

Lieut. Smith routes his request to the captain above him, whence it is relayed to the major, the colonel, the general heading the Ordnance Division, and thence to Patterson. The Undersecretary sends it to Nelson, who ships it downstream to the WPB production head, who passes it along through a few more division, section and unit heads down to Mr. Jones. The process is repeated in reverse when Mr. Jones makes reply to Lieut. Smith.

This business, Patterson and Nelson declared in a joint statement on relationships between the War Department and the WPB, is an "obstacle" to the objective of "obtaining maximum balanced supply in the most expeditious manner

American and Australian naval air forces have smashed a strong enemy invasion fleet at New Guinea bases just north of Australia, sinking or crippling 23 Japanese warships, transports and supply vessels.

Announcing this greatest United Nations air victory of the Pacific war yesterday, the Navy Department said only one Allied plane was lost in the attack.

Loss of life and supplies aboard the enemy ships is believed to have been great, as the attack probably came while the troopships and cargo vessels were heavily loaded. At least two of the ships sunk were heavy cruisers.

In addition to this destruction, a direct hit was scored on another enemy heavy cruiser by United Nations' planes raiding Rabaul, New Britain, northeast of New Guinea, it was said in an Australian communique heard at San Francisco last night and reported by the Associated Press. "Near misses were observed on four other large vessels," said the communique, which added that Allied planes raiding Kupang, in Dutch Timor dropped many bombs "with successful results" on runways and hangars.

The Box Score

Tabulating the results of the New Guinea raid, the communique listed the following boxscore of Japanese losses:

East Coast Shipping Ordered To Put Into Harbor at Night

stallations in New York Harbor and the burned out liner Normandie. His visit in New York was unscheduled.

"Just as rapidly as possible our surface patrol is being augmented by the air forces," Knox said.

Meanwhile, the Navy disclosed that two more merchant ships were torpedoed off the Atlantic Coast early Sunday with the loss of at least nine lives. Two seamen were listed as missing and were presumed to have been hit while in a lifeboat.

The Navy Secretary said that he was urging all shipping captains along the Eastern Coast to cooperate with the Navy in obeying safety rules "in following certain shipping lanes."

He declared the captains would lose their licenses if they failed to obey the orders.

Demonstrating the effectiveness of the shipping lanes, Knox asserted that of more than 1000 ships that had cleared New York for the South, only five had been sunk in the lane o tlined by Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commander of the Eastern sea frontier.

In connection with the increase in submarine patrols, Admiral Andrews had been given authority to requisition ships, Knox said.

He said another safety measure was the darkening of cities along the shore to prevent ships from being silhouetted against their glaring light.

Admiral Andrews, answering a question, explained that this did not mean a complete blackout, but rather the shading of street lights, the lowering of blinds in hotels and other measures which would decrease the glare.

Andrews named specifically Atlantic City as one of those which should be darkened to the extent outlined.

Knox was asked his opinion of shipping losses off the coast in comparison with the number of ships making safe journeys.

"The percentage of ships lost compared with the number getting through is extremely small," he replied. "However, we don't want to lose even one ship."

The Navy's disclosures yesterday included word that six lives were lost in the sinking of an American merchantman of medium tonnage which was waylaid by three enemy submarines that sent two torpedoes into her engine room. One projectile struck beneath a lifeboat as it was being lowered and blew the boat, occupied by six men, to bits. Thirty-three crew members, 29 of them uninjured, were landed at Morehead City, N. C., after being adrift on life rafts from three to nine hours. Among the survivors was George Widener Smith, of Washington, a pantryman, who was listed among the injured.

The other vessel, carrying a crew of 36, was torpedoed at 1:22 a. m. (E.W.T.), the Sixth Naval District said, after the target was outlined by red and green Very lights from a submarine. Three were killed and five reported missing, although three of the five were said to have been picked up by rescue craft. Fifteen of the crew were injured and nine were still undr hospital care yesterday at Charleston, S. C.

five were said to have been picked up by rescue craft. Fifteen of the crew were injured and nine were still under hospital care yesterday at Charleston, S. C.

The dead from the three-way sub attack were listed as James Otis Hagood, of Tom Creek, Ala.; Powell E. Foster, 232 Hickory Street, Dayton, Ohio; George Drake, North Scituate, R. I.; Horatio Armstrong, 35 Victory Boulevard, Staten Island, N. Y.; James Baskin, Route 3, Murfreesboro, Tenn., and Bertiz Canton, 1016 Victoria Street, Beaumont, Tex.

In the other torpedoing Amuncio Quizumbra, messman, Forestdale, R. I., and Clifford Gaines, second cook, Chester, Pa., were killed, and Joseph Corrigan, wiper, New York City, died after reaching a Charleston, S. C., hospital.

Vyazma Periled By Red Drive

man planes, as compared to 16 Russian planes lost, yesterday.

The encirclement of Gzhatsk means the Moscow-Minsk highway is blocked both between Gzhatsk and Vyazma and between Syazma and Smolensk.

When the Red army captured Dorogobuzh a few weeks ago it cut one highway leading into Gzhatsk from the German rear. Another Gzhatsk highway leading northward to Zubtsov now is in the zone of Russian encirclement about Rzhev. That left only the Moscow-Minsk highway and railway as German communication routes.

For weeks the Red army has been both north and south of this Moscow-Minsk highway and railway and there have been recent reports from the central front telling how the Soviets captured "an important highway linking great Nazi garrisons."

(The Stockholm reports went even further, relating that Soviet artillery now commanded the road from Vyazma to Smolensk, that a village only 10 miles from Vyazma was in Soviet hands and that Red army units were massing within a short distance of Vyazma's southern suburbs.

(German reports said 53-ton Soviet tanks were participating in this drive).

Supplied Only by Air

Soviet dispatches said Gzhatsk itself now was supplied only by air, and reported that one German transport plane carrying flour to the trapped garrison had been shot down.

This strengthened the belief that the Germans there are in the same plight as their comrades of the sixteenth army in the Staraya Russa district of the northwestern front.

The loss of the Gzhatsk and Vyazma garrisons undoubtedly would materially alter Adolf Hitler's whole plan for a spring onslaught.

It is from this Smolensk front that the German high command must launch any western front offensive. The sector commands ideal communications with many areas, and it has been in German hands long enough for the invaders to acquaint themselves thoroughly with its exploitation.

On this front other Soviet reports told of the death or wounding of 1250 Germans and the capture of four fortified points, one of them a dominant hill position.

Army, Navy Officials Deny Labor Curbs Are Needed

on war contracts before the House Naval Committee this morning.

2. Speaker Rayburn told a press conference that war-work stoppages because of strikes "have been reduced about to zero." Referring to letters pouring into Capitol accusing Congress of "playing politics" and attacking labor and business, the Speaker said that "if our people are thinking this way and are thus divided, Hitler and Mussolini and the Emperor of Japan would have paid a lot of money for what they are getting free."

3. Representative Gathings (Democrat), of Arkansas, in a House speech called for removal of Secretary of Labor Perkins and Sidney Hillman, war labor chief, as a "unity" move Gathings, who recently circulated a petition for suspension of the 40-hour week, urged action on the Smith-Vinson bill.

After the meeting of the Senate War Department Appropriations Subcommittee, Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chairman, said he thought officials were agreed on two things, first that a war labor policy should be developed by the War Labor Board and that legislation is "not necessary at this time."

Strikes "Should Be Out"

Knudsen said all strikes "should be out" and the War Labor Board should have full authority to settle them.

"The outstanding things that I find in plants where I go are, first, the overtime provisions are horribly mixed up and nobody understands them," Knudsen said.

Objecting to double time or "premium" payments for work on Saturdays, Sundays or holidays, Knudsen said some receiving double pay on Sundays will get "a little tired" and stay off one or two days. Patterson made the same point and said "this type of absenteeism has a disruptive effect on work schedules." Both supported the standard time and a half payments for work over 40 hours, while opposing the "premium day" basis.

Admiral Land testified: "Slowdowns may be serious now. That is incapable of being determined accurately. Loafing is serious now."

Thomas asked what he mean't by "loafing."

"Just exactly what I say, sir," said Land, "when a man doesn't put forth his maximum effort—whether he is instructed to do only so much by some agitating foreman, or whether it is because he deliberately wants to loaf, or beat the clock and get away off the ship 10 minutes ahead of time . . ." Land said there was "a very small percentage of agitators" in labor and management, who "disturb the stability" of the men.

Call for "Unity Parades"

Speaker Rayburn at his press conference said that "not from one section of the country but from every section of the country are coming letters and telegrams, many of them very insulting." He said they charge that "neither Government, manufacturers or labor is doing its job." He said meetings have been called in many sections for this and next Sunday, "which usually turn into indignation meetings."

"I hope," said the Speaker, "that in the future resolutions are not passed that will make headlines in Berlin and Tokyo.

"Instead of these meetings breeding division, discord, discontent and disunity, it would be much better for the safety of the country and our war effort if they were turned into unity parades and the effort and the wrath that is expended there be applied to doing some of the work of trying to win this war."

ever, was seen as the logical top officer of the WAACs. Another name mentioned for the post is that of Mrs. William Gutwillig, who is captain in charge of 500 girl volunteers in the New York Auxiliary Aircraft Warning Service. First block of volunteers will be recruited to do aircraft warning duty and women already in this service will be given enrollment preferences.

According to plans, the top WAAC officer would have the rank of major—but promotion this week of Maj. Julia Flikke, head of the Army Nurse Corps, to the rank of colonel indicates the Secretary of War might consider a colonelcy here also.

Uniform Designed

At Quartermaster Corps headquarters a WAAC uniform has been designed, but what color it will be and of what material are the secrets and also the questions that have caused many conferences during the past few weeks. It is a completely new uniform, an official declared yesterday, and not that being designed for the aircraft warning services before the WAAC bill was taken seriously.

The Mass measure differs from that setting up the WAAC in that it would provide members with full military status and complete equality with Navy men in grades, ranks, pay and promotion. The Army bill provides soldier pay for the enrollees without rank, but sets up a salary grade for directors, instructors and leaders. The top officer, although a colonel, would draw $3000 a year and maintenance.

President Roosevelt proposed yesterday that the Secretary of War be authorized to utilize any appropriation available to the military establishment to pay expenses of the WAAC. This suggestion was contained in a request for $17,579,311,253 for the Air, Engineering and Quartermaster Corps referred to Congress.

Women to Confer Upon Training For Wartime Jobs

Mobilization of women to meet demands for trained personnel in wartime employment will be discussed Friday and Saturday at a conference called by the Institute of Women's Professional Relations at the Mayflower Hotel.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the Selective Service system, will open the first session, at which Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers, who introduced the bill establishing a Woman's Army Auxiliary Corps, will preside.

Presidents, deans and personnel officers of colleges and universities will be present, as well as Government officials and private employers.

Mrs. Jouett Shouse, chairman of the institute's board, in announcing the meeting, said: "More chemists, more draftsmen, more industrial engineers, more factory supervisors, more doctors, more radio technicians, more of almost every classification are required as quickly as possible in our total war program. Women stand ready to work, but there is need to clarify what jobs needs to be filled in the expanding industrial program."

Beaverbrook Gets Special Job Here

London, March 18 (AP).—Lord Beaverbrook is being sent to the United States to aid in pooling war resources of the United Nations, Clement R. Attlee, Dominions secretary, announced in Commons today.

In addition, Lord Beaverbrook also will perform "such other duties as may be entrusted to him from time to time by the war cabinet," Attlee said.

to March 13.

If the filling station has begun operations since March 13, the prices of other operators in the community shall govern its price level.

The maximum price for each grade of gasoline sold at the station must be posted conspicuously in letters at least 5 inches tall, the order said.

As news of the price-fixing order came District filling station operators were about to enter into their first day of business under the WPB's 20 per cent reduction order.

No one could tell immediately what the effect of this order on the average motorist will be. Some operators here were inclined to think it would be negligible, pointing out that motorists were already conserving travel and hence gasoline because of the rubber shortage.

Sunday closing by many stations will also cut down gasoline consumption, one operator pointed out. While there is no official agreement about Sunday closing, many stations are expected to shut their doors that day, staying open only between the hours of 7 a. m. and 7 p. m. the other days.

The WPB order requires stations to confine operations to a 72-hour week, but each operator is to determine what hours and what days his station will be open.

One operator here said it would still be possible, in all likelihood, to get gasoline somewhere in town at any hour.

As the curtailment program was about to begin, William Boyd, president of the American Petroleum Institute and chairman of the Petroleum Industry War Council, issued a warning to ten million motorists in the restricted area that they must cooperate whole-heartedly in the curtailment program if a rigid card system of rationing is to be avoided.

"Even more drastic restrictions in civilian consumption may have to follow," Boyd said, "and the necessity of coupon rationing can be avoided by the fullest cooperation of every consumer in the program."

Born March 3, 1942. Kicked the bucket a few days later. The beginning and end of the so-called "Victory Suit"!

Actually, it never existed at all. This scarecrow phantom was never anything more than a minor nightmare, dreamed up by someone in a moment of fumbling patriotism.

Oh! yes—you've squirmed through movie shots of funny looking men wearing coats that fit like sausage casings. You've read about trousers built to cover nothing heftier than a pipe stem. The radio has probably spoiled your dinner with ghost stories about skeletons stripped of all lapels. But have you actually seen these atrocities in circulation?

Of course not—and you're not going to, either! Take that on the word of Uncle Sam. Digest this, from the Government's Official Release—"the ordered style revisions will not materially change the appearance of a suit or overcoat from those now being worn. The only noticeable change in a suit will be the absence of trouser cuffs. In that respect, civilian trousers will merely follow the trend of military uniforms and formal dress trousers, which are cuffless".

Right now, the only suit worthy of the name "Victory" is that buckskin outfit worn by the Minute-Man on Defense Bond posters. Let's keep on loading his rifle 'til it gets red hot. That's where our dollars should go—instead of foolishly rushing to beat those cockeyed rumors about screwy styles.

So much then, for the not-lamented "Victory Suit". May it rest in peace!

Army Will Form Two New Corps, Intensify Training of Desert Units

Two new hard-hitting Army corps will be created and large scale training of desert troops will be inaugurated as a part of the expansion of the Nation's land forces this year, it was announced yesterday.

Brig. Gen. Mark L. Clark, chief of staff of the ground forces of the Army, made this disclosure, stating that a large training area in the Southwest is to be established for developing desert fighters for the Army.

Intensive training of troops in amphibious warfare is also on the Nation's 1942 military schedule, Clark said, along with development of strong units of mountain, airborne and other special troops.

The two additional Army corps will give the American forces 11 such units. Plans previously announced call for boosting the number of infantry and motorized divisions from 27 to 59. There will be no increase in the number of field armies, four of which now exist.

Three of the new divisions will be created this month, two more in May, three in June and four each month beginning in July, Gen. Clark said.

He spoke at a press conference of Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, new commander of the Army ground forces, arranged to explain the new unit's organization and 1942 training plans.

Gen. McNair said the recent streamlining of the Army high command was designed primarily to take some of the load off the War Department, rather than give the Army Air Force its proper place in the military setup as some officials have declared.

"The air force was given its new important place last June," he said. "There was little change made in its status by the recent reorganization order."

A group of officers from McNair's headquarters and others from the armored force selected a site for the new desert training area just last week, Clark revealed. He said only that it is "somewhere west of the Colorado River."

There will be no large maneuvers held by the Army this year such as took place last summer and fall, Gen. Clark said. The largest field exercises to be held will be by "reinforced" corps of four to six divisions.

Training of the new divisions will take 10 to 12 months, it was said, before they are ready for action.

Chinese Join British in Big Burma Battle

By the United Press

London, March 18.—Two American fliers raided the big Japanese air base at Moulmein, catching the enemy by surprise today and setting 15 planes afire and damaging others while Chinese and British troops clashed with a Japanese spearhead 120 miles north of Rangoon in a violent renewal of the battle for Burma, Far Eastern dispatches reported.

The American fliers swept low over airdromes at Moulmein and nearby at dawn, according to official Chungking reports, and raked grounded planes with heavy machine-gun fire. Nine Japanese pursuit planes, two bombers and four transports were left blazing and several other planes were seriously damaged.

Moulmein, 100 miles east of Rangoon in Burma's narrow southeastern arm, is one of the principal Japanese air and army bases in the Burma campaign.

The ground battle north of Rangoon was the first major action in Burma since the imperial army swung around to an east-west defense line after losing the capital.

The Japanese were driving up the Rangoon-Mandalay road with Toungoo, 165 miles north of Rangoon, as their next objective. A communique from Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's headquarters in New Delhi located the battle as being in the Kanyutkin area, 45 miles below Toungoo, and said it was still in progress.

The British and Chinese had prepared for it by moving up strong reinforcements during the ten-day lull in which the Japanese consolidated their lines in south Burma.

Japanese were attacking along the easternmost of the two communications routes between occupied lower Burma and Mandalay. Along the second road, where the defenders were massed at Prome, 170 miles northwest of Rangoon, the Japanese have not attempted to advance beyond Taikkyi, 45 miles north of the fallen capital.

The communique said, however, that enemy parties in boats have paddled up the Irrawaddy River west of the Rangoon-Prome Railroad as far as Monyo and Tharrawaw, 65 and 85 miles south of Prome, to contact traitorous Burmese natives. These fifth-column parties were reported to have withdrawn later.

The communique said that a large number of empire forces, mostly Indian Ghurkas, who were cut off in the battle of Tak-Kayn in the Irrawaddy delta, have escaped and rejoined their main forces at Prome.

5 Die as 5 Army Planes Crash In Ohio and West Virginia

Lima, Ohio, March 18.—Pilots of four Army planes perished today as their ships crashed and burned in a blinding snowstorm on farms 6 miles east of Lima.

The Army air base at Wayne County Airport, Detroit, reported the ships left there on a mission for the Air Corps Ferry Command.

Pilots killed, all second lieutenants were listed as Edward H. Saunders, 26, Lake Village, Ark., flight leader; Arnel J. Kennedy, 26, Oklahoma City; Eugene H. Anderson, 23, Kewanee, Ill., and Earl A. Houser, 23, Pesotum, Ill.

The ships fell within a half-mile radius, three of them in open fields and one in a woods. All burst into flames.

Bomber Crashes; 1 Body Recovered

Bartow, W. Va., March 18 (AP).—Smashed against the rocky crest of 3,600-foot Burner Mountain, a twin-motored Army bomber burned so fiercely today that rescuers could not determine immediately whether one or two lives were lost.

One body with the charred shreds of an Army uniform clinging to it was recovered two hours after the crash.

Forest rangers who originally reported they could see two bodies in the hull said later if there was a second one it had been consumed. Officials waited for the big aluminum shell to cool before making an examination.

The big ship crashed nose down into John's Camp Run in the southeastern West Virginia mountains, a mile from the tannery village of Frank.

Brazil Police Nip Jap Plot To Stir Revolt

By the Associated Press

A plot by which Japanese in Brazil hoped to set an internal uprising on a moment's notice by radio from Tokyo was uncovered by Brazilian police at Sao Paulo last night, while public resentment smoldered and flared in two other Latin-American Republics over the loss of ships to Axis U-boats.

The disclosure of Japanese undercover operations in Brazil, which already has lost four ships to torpedoes in the Atlantic and probably a fifth which is too long overdue, told of Japanese plotters listening nightly to the surreptitious broadcasts for the word to strike—possibly in concert with other Axis spies.

Brazil tlso took over the Casa de Italia, a large building used by Italians in Rio de Janeiro, ostensibly for social purposes but believed to have been a rallying place for pro-Fascists potentially dangerous to Brazil.

The other countries gravely concerned over sinkings are Uruguay, which has broken relations with the Axis and otherwise has manifested cooperation with the United Nations, and Chile, which is a Pan-American holdout along with Argentina in still harboring Axis diplomats.

Uruguayan officials charged angrily that an Axis U-boat "flagrantly and brutally" flouted international law in the sinking of the freighter Montevideo, declaring the raider fired two torpedoes without warning and then shelled the foundering Uruguayan ship.

Upon receipt of details of the attack from the ship's captain, Uruguay formally laid the blame on the Axis and in a note to the Argentine foreign office said she would seek redress through the Pan American Union.

Foreign Minister Alberto Guani said the sinking "violated all essential rules and rights of humanity."

Meanwhile, new demonstrations developed against the Axis nations. Students quit their classes and paraded in protest. Police redoubled vigilance in front of German offices and business houses.

It was learned that the government will hold all Uruguayan ships in port until arangements are completed for them to travel in convoys.

Capt. Rodriguez Varela sent his report on the attack from Port au Prince, Haiti, where he was landed with 30 survivors out of the original crew of 49.

In the face of public demonstrations over the sinking of the Chilean freighter Tolten outside New York harbor last Friday, the Chilean government appealed for "serenity" and opined that the attacking submarine—if indeed a submarine was responsible—would have spared the ship had it been permitted to proceed with lights and flag to denote its neutrality.

Greatest Part Of War Goods Goes Overseas

Intensified attacks on German industry by R. A. F. bombers and increased activity by the commandos in occupied Europe were predicted last night by Lord Halifax, British Ambassador to the United States, who asserted that "we count no sacrifice too great for victory."

In a move to tell the American people how far their British ally "has gone along the hard road of an all-out total war effort," he said:

"The quantities of men and of equipment we have sent aboard have been limited by one thing only—ships. For those who talk about our keeping everything in the British Isles, here is our answer. It is a fact, not before made public, that for months past no less than 80 per cent of our total military production, and every soldier for whom shipping space was available, have been sent overseas."

Broadcasting over the Blue Network, Lord Halifax declared that the striking power of the bomber command is being stepped up and that today Germany "is beginning to learn what heavy air attacks can mean to great centers of war production."

"As the weather gets better the German war machine will suffer more and more devastating attacks on its ports, factories, refineries and railroads," he said. "The increased effectiveness of our raids will not only be brought about by our having more aircraft, but the aircraft will be carrying more bombs, and the bombs are getting heavier."

Lord Halifax, in a broad outline of the British war effort, said that he felt "pretty sure" that the hit-run raids by the commandos and parachute troops would "increase in number and in strength."

"The Germans don't like these raids," he said. "They never know when or where we will strike, and they can never be sure just what our strength is going to be. That's one of the reasons why the Germans are keeping more and more troops idle in western Europe."

He pointed, too, at the Mediterranean area as vital to keep the door open into Russia and also to keep Germany and Japan from making contact. "Unless I'm much mistaken," the Middle East position is going to loom large in the news this summer," he said.

On the British Isles, the envoy said, England has two million home guards, "only part-time soldiers, whose full-time work is for the most part in war industries," and some 1,500,000 regular troops.

President Asks 17 Billions Of Congress for Army

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to appropriate more than 17 billion dollars for the Army which would raise the allocations for defense and the war to the stupendous total of $160,410,286,886 in less than two years.

He asked that $8,515,861,251 be made available to the Army Air Corps but it was learned that only about half of that would be for planes. The rest would be used for parts, supplies and other necessities.

The recommendations covered every major War Department activity but were so barren of detail that appropriations committee members will know nothing of the program until officials explain behind closed doors.

An Appropriations Committee tabulation showed that appropriations, contract authorizations and recommendations for the defense and war program since June 30, 1940, totaled $142,005,354,813 on February 12. Besides today's request, the President has asked $825,894,000 additional for the Navy.

Principal items in Mr. Roosevelt's request today, in addition to the Air Corps fund, were:

For construction of buildings, utilities and appurtenances at military posts, $4,454,775,033.

For military construction and defense installations, $866,165,000.

For Army transportation, $817,912,000.

For signal service, $748,149,000.

For ordnance service and supplies, $591,696,443.

Pay for the Army and its specialist corps, $327,331,562.

W. M. McKee, Jr. Funeral Today In Chillicothe, Ohio

Funeral services for William M. McKee, jr., 29, son of Lieut. Col. McKee, chairman of the War Department's construction board, who died yesterday of injuries received in an automobile-truck collision in Chillicothe, Ohio, will be held there this morning at 11 o'clock. Burial will be in Chillicothe.

Col. and Mrs. McKee, who reside at 2000 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, went to Chillicothe yesterday and are expected to go to their home near Pittsburgh after the funeral before returning to Washington.

Seriously injured in the same accident was Mrs. E. K. Johnson, an aunt of the victim, who was reported last night by relatives in Washington to be "a little better" although she was believed here to be still unconscious from severe head injuries. The accident occurred Monday night.

Young McKee, according to his stepsister, Miss Nancy Kier, of Washington, managed Mrs. Johnson's farm at Frankfort, near Chillicothe.

141 Charged With Cheese Plot

Defendants were accused of controlling prices paid to some 200,000 dairy farmers for milk sold to approximately 21,000 cheese factories.

The indictment alleged the "fictitious" base price for American cheese established by the defendants on the Wisconsin Cheese Exchange was used as the basis for determining prices paid to dairy farmers for milk sold throughout the United States.

It also alleged the defendants controlled and fixed the price paid to farmers for all fluid milk, regardless of use, sold in city areas throughout the country, where such areas operated either under Federal marketing agreement orders or State price control orders.

Other allegations were that price fixing exerted a direct and controlling effect on wholesale and retail prices of fluid milk and cream in all large city areas of the Nation, and that the defendants depressed prices paid producers in the spring months of maximum cheese production and increased prices in the winter months of minimum production.

Among the defendants named in both indictments were the Wisconsin Cheese Exchange; Armour & Co., Chicago; the Borden Co., New York; the Cudahy Packing Co., Chicago; the Kraft Cheese Co., Chicago; the National Cheese Institute, Inc., Plymouth; Swift & Co., Chicago; Wilson & Co., Inc., Chicago.

Among the defendants named in the first indictment were the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., New York; Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., Minneapolis, and the National Dairy Products Corporation, New York.

The Wisconsin Cheese Exchange issued a statement denying the charges and promising that they will be "fully answered."

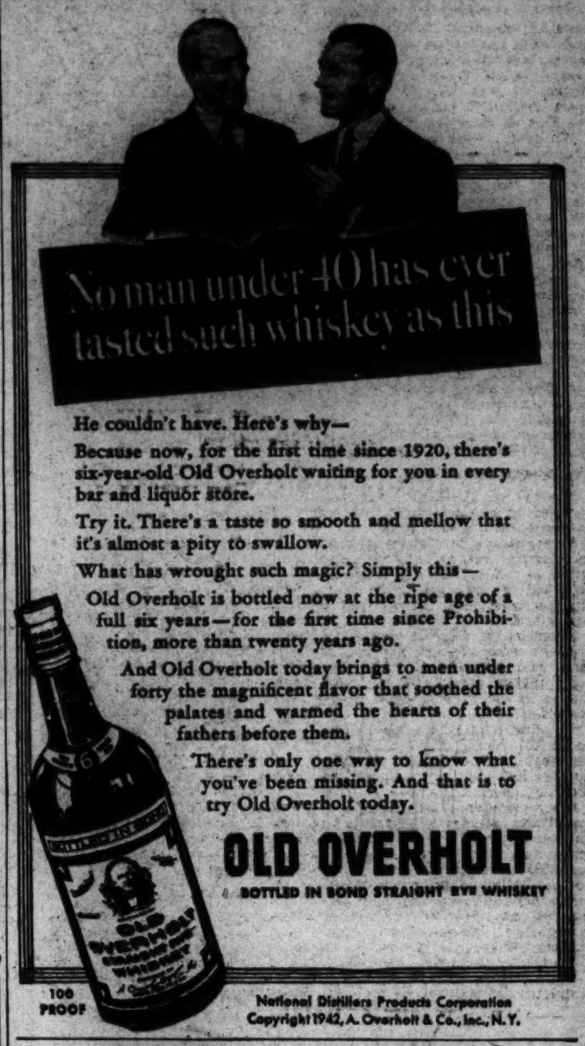
Army Refuses to Enlist Berryville Boy, 15

Hagerstown, Md., March 18.—Army recruiting officials here told William Orndorff, Berryville, Va., to "stay single, don't get hurt and we'll wait for you a couple of years," when the 15-year-old youth wrote the recruiter that he "could come for me any time if you accept my offer" to join up.



He couldn't have. Here's why—

Because now, for the first time since 1920, there's six-year-old Old Overholt waiting for you in every bar and liquor store.

Try it. There's a taste so smooth and mellow that it's almost a pity to swallow.

What has wrought such magic? Simply this—

Old Overholt is bottled now at the ripe age of a full six years—for the first time since Prohibition, more than twenty years ago.

And Old Overholt today brings to men under forty the magnificent flavor that soothed the palates and warmed the hearts of their fathers before them.

There's only one way to know what you've been missing. And that is to try Old Overholt today.

Increase Expected In D. C. Selectees

Lower Standards for Eyes and Teeth Will Make Many More Men Available

Recent changes in the Army's physical standards affecting eyes and teeth are expected materially to increase Washington's contribution to the man power supply of the Nation, it was learned yesterday from William E. Leahy, director of the District Selective Service.

While it was previously announced that registrants of the third lottery would be called after the first two groups of registrants were exhausted, selective service officials declined to be quoted on the possible effect the changed rulings, or how many selectees it would affect.

Leahy's announcement, made shortly after the Third National Lottery under the Selective Service Act ended at 7:10 a. m., stated that selectees now need have merely enough teeth to enable them to eat "Army chow," instead of a specified number of teeth, a requirement which along with visual standards was responsible for the deferment of approximately 20 per cent of Washington registrants.

Eye Standards Lowered

The eye requirements have been lowered to admit men for limited or noncombatant service.

All registrants previously deferred for physical reasons and classified either as 1-B or 4-F, are being reclassified in order to make them eligible for at least limited service, Leahy said.

Meantime, it was learned that a printer's error—the duplication of serial number 2885—and two missing numbers constituted the only slipups in the lottery which ended yesterday.

The first mistake was discovered about 3½ hours after the lottery had begun. It developed that serial number 2885 had been assigned two order numbers, 742 and 1638. After a hasty conference, Selective Service officials decided to assign order number 1638 to the twice appearing serial number and to consider the first 2885 as misprinted 2385. Order number 742 was then removed from the lottery and every number higher than 741 was advanced one number in sequence. In other words, order number 743 became 742 and so on down the list to the final one drawn.

It was found, however, at the completion of the lottery that two serial numbers, 6342 and 2069, had not been drawn, and that instead of 7000 capsules having been removed from the gold fish bowl, 6997 had been drawn. After another speedy conference, the two missing numbers and the misprinted 2385 were mixed again and drawn in the following order:

Serial number 6342 became order number 6998; 2069 became 6999, and the problem child of the draft 2385, became 7000.

Immediately following the last drawing, Selective Service officials announced that the lottery was complete and that the master lists from which the local boards throughout the Nation would officially assign order numbers to the registrants of February 16, involved in yesterday's lottery, would be sent to the boards as soon as the Government Printing Office could complete them.

Selectees Named Today

Director Leahy announced also the Washington registrants who will be inducted into the armed forces today at Camp Lee, Va. The inductees and the local boards from which they are being sent follows:

Seven in Riddled Lifeboat Survive 38 Days on Pacific

By the Associated Press

Suva, Fiji Islands, March 18.—Another heroic wartime saga of the seas, of dangerous days and nights in storm-tossed lifeboats, was related today by survivors of two vesels torpedoed by Japanese submarines last December.

One group of seven constituted the only survivors of the Donerail, the former Danish motorship freighter Nordhval, which was torpedoed the night of December 9 while en route from Suva to Vancouver, B. C.

Eleven others survived the tanker Prusa, torpedoed in Hawaiian waters December 17.

For 38 days the Donerail survivors braved the hardships of the sea and the constant danger of another enemy attack. Finally they reached land at Tarawa (Cook Island) in the Gilbert group.

The Donerail, they related, almost rammed a surface submarine at night. The sub crash-dived. Later it came to the surface and shelled the vessel.

Twenty-four of the 48 persons on the Donerail were killed by seven shells fired by the undersea raider. Eight passengers—two women, five men and an 18-month-old child—were killed when a shell hit the lifeboat, swung out for lowering, in which they were sitting.

The remaining 24, all members of the crew, got away safely in a steel boat badly punctured by shell fragments. The craft's air tanks kept it afloat, said M. Chambers, of Sydney, one of the survivors.

For a week the castaways battled a gale while trying to make one of the Hawaiian Islands. The elements won out and they charted a course for Tarawa.

For 2000 miles they fought toward safety. One by one their numbers diminished. The captain was washed overboard. Sixteen died of exposure and starvation. Food and water were ruined by immersion. They subsisted on flying fish which they cleverly caught, on biscuits soaked by salt water but edible, on vitamin tablets and tinned milk and rain water caught with a sail.

Seven, all Danes except Chambers, reached Tarawa. There they found a Japanese party had come and gone. In two groups they made their way to Nanouti, thence to Suva.

The group from the Prusa likewise had been at sea many days in an open boat. Their vessel, a tanker with a crew of 34, was torpedoed without warning in Hawaiian waters. Nine were killed by the torpedo and the remaining 25 got away in two boats. The group which arrived here, originally numbering 12 but reduced to 11 by a death at sea, did not know that the other lifeboat had been rescued late in December and its 13 occupants landed at Pearl Harbor, on the Island of Oahu.

For 31½ days the Prusa group dodged danger and fought extremely adverse weather. After 2500 miles of sailing they reached land in the Gilbert group.

Roosevelt Sets Up Works Corps For Aliens From Coast Areas

By Merriman Smith
United Press Sports Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday set up a "work corps" for aliens evacuated from military areas to guard against sabotage and espionage.

The corps, in which enlistments will be for the duration, will be under the jurisdiction of a War Relocation Authority established to provide "useful work" for evacuees and to govern their working conditions and rates of pay.

While there is nothing compulsory about enlistments, White House Secretary Stephen T. Early said that persons relocated who do not volunteer probably "will be on their own" and eventually will have to shift for themselves.

The program, he said, is part of the President's effort to establish a system that will be a model of "humane and constructive treatment" of aliens and other persons removed from the areas to guarantee the Nation's security.

Superviser Is Named

It will be supervised by Milton S. Eisenhower, former land use coordinator for the Agriculture Department, who was named by the President to head the new Relocation Authority.

The President's executive order authorized Eisenhower to "accomplish" all necessary evacuation of persons from military zones which have not been cleared by Army authorities and to provide, as far as feasible, useful work for evacuees in industry, commerce, agriculture or public projects.

He was directed to "safeguard" the public interest in employing such persons and to prescribe the terms and conditions of their work.

Eisenhower will assist evacuees in management and disposal of their personal property in military areas and will cooperate with Alien Property Custodian Leo T. Crowley in formulating general policies to govern handling of property seized from foreign nationals.

No Chance for Sabotage

Early said he believed that agriculture would be one of the major fields in which the work corps will operate. Japanese aliens removed from military zones along the Pacific Coast already have gone to work in Colorado sugar beet fields.

He felt certain that none of the corps members would be assigned to tasks "in which there would be a possibility of sabotage," pointing out that the executive order stipulated that Eisenhower should "safeguard" the public interest in providing them jobs.

Their activities, he said, would be "contributing directly to the war production effort, thereby releasing other labor for war work."

The executive order requires the War and Justice Departments to provide whatever police and investigation services Eisenhower may find necessary, and facilities or other existing Government agencies are made available to supply housing, engineering supervision, employment location and health supervision for the corps.

Mr. Roosevelt also set up a "liaison committee," composed of representatives of numerous Federal departments and agencies, to assist in operation of the program.

Philatelists to Get 'MacArthur' Covers

Postmaster Gen. Frank C. Walker yesterday announced the establishment of a fourth class postoffice at MacArthur, Raleigh County, W. Va., in honor of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

This is the first postoffice in the country to bear the name of the distinguished American general. The new postoffice is located in the heart of the coal mining region of West Virginia.

Philatelists are expected to swamp the newly-established postoffice for "MacArthur" covers.

Fly Denies FCC Maintains 'Gestapo Unit'

By the Associated Press

Chairman James F. Fly of the Federal Communications Commission, hotly denied at a House Rules Committee meeting yesterday that the FCC maintains "a Gestapo" to "beat down and cow" its opponents.

Testifying on a resolution by Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, for a Congressional investigation of the commission, Fly said "I certainly object to the type of investigation you have in mind" when Cox asked if the commission had sought to bring "pressure" to block the projected inquiry.

The committee arrived at no conclusion on Cox's resolution after having heard the FCC chairman for the second time in less than a week. It had not finished questioning him when it adjourned without setting a time for another session.

Cox, who did most of the questioning, asked Fly if the commission "maintains a Gestapo used to beat down . . . and cow . . . everyone who might differ."

"That's entirely false, sir," retorted Fly, who explained that the commission maintained a force of nine investigators to handle its investigatory work.

Rescue Squad Saves Child's Life At Falls Church

Prompt action of the rescue squad of the Falls Church (Va.) Volunteer Fire Department early yesterday probably saved the life of 8-year-old Leland Edward Talbott, of 212 Meadow Lane, Falls Church, who is ill with pneumonia.

For nearly three hours members of the volunteer rescue squad worked over the youngster with a respirator. Last night he was reported to be recovering.

The child is a third grade pupil at St. James' Elementary School, Falls Church. His father, James S. Talbott, is a White House guard.

'Sergeant York' Captures Boxoffice Strongholds

Warner Film Bids Fair to Gross $10,000,000; Former Washingtonian in Cast of 'Macbeth;' Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

"SERGEANT YORK" may not have won the Academy Award, but it seems headed for boxoffice grosses that probably will be quite as satisfactory to the Warner Brothers, Jesse L. Lasky, who fathered the entire project over a quarter of a century, and all concerned.

JESSE L. LASKEY

In its preliminary "road show" engagements and the earlier of its exhibitions as a regular, popular-priced attraction, this Gary Cooper starrer already has accounted for something like four million dollars at the ticket wickets. It is more in demand by exhibitors of all ratings than perhaps any other screen feature currently before the public. This quite corroborates a recent Gallup poll that was summarized in the statement that "Sergeant York" was the top picture in the preference of the cross-section of the public contacted in the survey.

On the basis of all this, the expectation is that by the time it is finally retired from the screen—if ever—"Sergeant York" will have run up the imposing grand total of something in the neighborhood of ten million dollars, thus writing itself down as one of the greatest money-makers in the history of the cinema.

We've been saying from the outset that that's the kind of a picture it is. So has everybody else, for that matter.

This huge success of "Sergeant York" will come as hearty news to the many, both in and out of the industry, who have been cheered by Jesse Lasky's "comeback" to a place among the foremost of the motion picture producers. Once one of the real powers in the industry, Mr. Lasky, through a high sense of honor and obligation, fell on lean days. From the time of Alvin C. York's valorous exploits in the First World War, Lasky nurtured the notion that his life's story would make a smash hit on the screen—provided permission to film it ever could be obtained. That was a little matter that took around 20 years to accomplish. For once, patience paid off. Since Mr. Lasky owns "a piece of the picture," he will do fairly well for himself out of that ten million dollars. As far as that is concerned, he has done fairly well for himself already.

The Guild Likes Washington

Possibly because it has in the neighborhood of 8000 subscribers on its books in the Capital, or maybe because it is among the first of the producing organizations to realize that, more than ever before, Washington is one of the best "show towns" in the country, the Theater Guild looks upon this city as a very elegant place in which to present its plays. Between the acts of "Without Love," at the National Monday night, Lawrence Langner, who, in association with Theresa Helburn—also present Monday night—practically is the Theater Guild, wondered if we had noticed that all of the Guild productions had visited E Street this season prior to their New York engagements. "That," said Mr. Langner, "was not accidental. All of our plays will be shown here ahead of New York, if bookings can be arranged. We like Washington." Washington isn't exactly mad at the Guild, either.

Samuel W. King, delegate to the mainland from the Island of Hawaii, will be on hand at the Earle tomorrow night to greet his old friend, Ray Kinney, whose orchestra will present the week's "Salute to Hawaii" stage revue. Along with Gov. Poindexter, of the island, Mr. King was instrumental in dubbing Kinney "Hawaii's Musical Ambassador to the Mainland." Incidentally, Hugh Conover, one of WJSV's star announcers, will serve as commentator for the "Hawaii" revue, making two in a row for him at the loudspeaker.

When the Maurice Evans-Judith Anderson "Macbeth" comes to the National next week, William Nichols, former Washingtonian, will be in the cast in the minor role of Donalbane and as understudy for Malcolm. A former Western High School student, Mr. Nichols has been playing in summer stock and also has been cast in plays that opened on Broadway, but closed almost simultaneously. His present is his first big chance. His sister, Mrs. Charles Waters Thompson, still makes her home in this city with her husband, Dr. Thompson, but his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Nichols, now are resident in New York.

Hard Lines for the Film Stars!

Hollywood, Calif., March 18.—Few of our stars bear any resemblance to Mr. Addison Simms, from Seattle, who never forgets a name, face or phone number. Actors seldom remember any of these things, but when it comes to memorizing dialog, that's different. George Brent takes one lingering look at a page of script, picks up the conversation where he left off, and sails through without a slip. Barbara Stanwyck is no less glib, though she bones up on her lines in her dressing room, reciting them to her maid. Nancy Coleman is letter perfect also, but has a habit of mumbling them over, so she's nicknamed "Lady Macbeth." Bette Davis and Olivia de Havilland are "home workers." Bette takes her script to bed with her; Livvy copies her lines slowly in a round, school girl hand, to fix them in her memory. Jimmy Cagney, like most former vaudeville actors, picks up his lines like a house afire, while Humphrey Bogart is slow and painstaking. The only exception to all of this excellence is John Barrymore, who blandly reads his from a blackboard behind the camera.

When Irene Dunne was assigned to "Theodora Goes Wild," she took a trip to Europe to avoid making it. She didn't think she could do screwball comedies. But that's the one that started a cycle which has included "The Awful Truth," "My Favorite Wife" and "Lady in a Jam." But Mary McCarthy, who wrote "Theodora" only got $150 for that story.

When 2500 new boys moved into Camp Hahn, they were asked what entertainers they'd like. It was expected, of course, they'd name Hollywood's biggest stars, but they wanted Donald Duck, Porky Pig and Mrs. Goldfarb, of Fibber McGee and Molly's show.

POSITIVELY FINAL WEEK ON F STREET

Columbia

Katharine Hepburn Week in Washington reaches its climax today when "Woman of the Year" resumes its F Street career at the Columbia. With Miss Hepburn's appearance at the National a sellout for the week, the Columbia's offering is a fortunate compromise for those who feel that this is the week they simply must see Hepburn. And in the shadow play they get Spencer Tracy tossed in, too.

As if you could have missed hearing at least a smidgit about "Woman of the Year," this ill advise you that as it, Miss Hepburn acts a troubled Cassandra of our broiling cosmos, concerned with the mighty and their deeds. Imagine, then, her perplexion when love comes to her in the person of a sports writer whose days are spent on such projects as baseball, football and other nonecosmic activities. But "Woman of the Year" faces her destiny, marries the guy and proceeds to mess up a couple of lives in the process.

Despite this foundation of a very genuine and serious problem—the efforts of two dissimilar persons to make a go of marriage—"Woman of the Year" is presented as comedy and often excellent comedy. The spectacle of Miss Hepburn and her important friends at a cocktail party, of Miss H. at a baseball game and the arrival of a mittel-europa politico on her wedding night are buoyantly amusing. Tracy's unhappy man, dropping overcoat and cigarettes at a ladies' lecture is side-splitting proof of the actor's comic gifts. The film takes its time in drawing its threads together, a trifle too much of it; aside from that, though, it's timely, polished and urbane.

George Stevens directed, with Fay Bainter, Reginald Owen and Minor Watson topping the supporting players.

Little

Seeming like the product of another age, though it came out of France in 1937, "Mayerling" returned yesterday to the screen of the Little, where it has enjoyed four previous engagements. Charles Royer's superb performance as the ill-starred Austrian Archduke is one he never has surpassed, while Danielle Darrieux will be remembered always as the lovely commoner, no matter what happens to her stalled career.

"Mayerling" is a reconstruction of the events surrounding the death by his own hand of the heir apparent to the Austro-Hungarian throne. He was found dead at his hunting lodge, as was the beautiful baroness with whom he was supposedly in love. The film is based on Claude Anet's novel "Idyl's End" and emphasizes the regeneration in the Archduke brought on by his chance meeting with Marie Vetsera.

Romantic to the core, the story has been admirably produced, knowingly directed by Anatole Litvak and ably translated with English subtitles. Altogether "Mayerling" holds its own as one of the finer films to come from the artists of a once-great nation.

Athlete Makes Good

Alan Ladd, who will have a stellar role in "This Gun for Hire," was a track and swimming star at North Hollywood High School. He was Pacific Coast diving champion.

'DoubleTalk' Okay With Ann Sothern

Hollywood.—Ann Sothern has qualified as Hollywood's No. 1 interpreter of Broadwayese, lingo of the show business.

In "Get Rich Quick Maisie," latest of the series, the action revolves around a small-time vaudeville booking agency. A line in the script presents the following: "An Indian piped a likely head, inked her, got her a flicker bill and now he's a heel."

Miss Sothern read it and, nodded understanding of the theatrical doubletalk. "It means," she translated, "that a down-and-out booking agent signed a talented actress, got a movie contract for her and made himself a successful agent."

Outside of That, Yes!

New York, March 18.

"Woman of the Year," the Katharine Hepburn portrayal of a world-renowned columnist, recently completed a long run at Radio City Music Hall. The movie critics, as was expected, referred to Miss Hepburn's professional role as being Dorothy Thompsonish . . . Miss Thompson was at John La Touche's home last night and discussed "Woman of the Year." She denied any similarity between that characterization and herself. "In the picture, the columnist is young and beautiful. "I'm not," said Dorothy. "She can't cook. I can. And she speaks Slovenian. I don't."

KATHARINE HEPBURN

In the coming Congressional elections the President will support all those legislators who supported him before December 7, regardless of party affiliations . . . Raoul de Roussy de Sales, de Gaulle's representative here, has had his "Making of Tomorrow" accepted by the Book-of-the-Month Club . . . Groucho Marx will leave Hollywood, to appear in the forthcoming Broadway musical, "Fun to Be Free." His brother, Harpo, will tour the Army camps for the USO in a playlet written for him by Kaufman & Hart. The third brother, Chico, will continue with his orchestra . . . Irwin Shaw, author of the antiwar play, "Bury the Dead," has finished his new paly, "Children's Beggar." He's going to Hollywood for one last film job, then will enlist in the Army.

At the Los Angeles première of Salvador Dali's ballet, "Labyrinth," the audience viewed something which they and the reviewers thought was an added touch of Dali's surrealism. The curtain went up, revealing part of the set, and then came down. It went up again, revealing a bit more, and came down again. The third time the curtain went up it stayed up until the ballet was over . . . "This," the reviewers reported, "is a new technique in opening a ballet" . . . It wasn't a new technique, but only a mistake made by an erractic stagehand.

Courtney Terrett, the foreign correspondent whose friends thought him missing, is in Washington. "The acute contrast between New York and Europe at war," he explains, "necessitated rest and readjustment" . . . Myrna Loy, who arrived in New York for the Navy Relief show, will proceed to a cross-country tour of the Army camps . . . Sam Byrd, the actor-producer whose first book, "Small Town South," just won the $2500 Houghton, Mifflin prize, now is in the Navy as an ensign. Sis first assignment is to promote the Navy Relief show in Charleston next Saturday, where "Ladies in Retirement" is being presented. The locale and dialogue of that British thriller story have been altered and made Carolinian.

Arthur Schwartz and Howard Dietz, the songwriters, have sold a song, "Till I Return," for the new William Powell-Hedy Lamarr movie, "Crossroads." Schwartz wrote the melody in Hollywood, and air-mailed a recording of it to his collaborator, who is in New York, and who proceeded to write the lyric for it . . . When the Floradors costumes were rented for six stars who wore them in the Navy Relief show at Madison Square Garden, Sophie Tucker's had to be let out 24 inches . . . Washington's major mystery—now that Viereck has been convicted—is why no Congressman or Senator has made a speech challenging those colleagues for whom Viereck had ghost-written speeches and articles.

At the First Aid class conducted at the M-G-M studios, many members of the film-colony were bandaged by their colleagues. The bandaging was of various types, to cover every form of possible injury . . . The official instructor went from one prone figure to another, inquiring as to the nature of the "accident." He stopped before the bandaged screne-writer, Iry Brecher, and asked: "What happened to you?" . . . "I got run over," he replied, "by a rickshaw."

Some months ago Ward Moore was fired from the Federal Writers Project. He decided to continue his writing, by working as a taxi-driver, and completing his novel in his spare time. That novel, first of a series, was published by Harpers. It's called "Breathe The Air Again." . . . Dr. Henry Levine, trumpet-player in the N. B. C. Symphony Orchestra, finally made "who's who"—not for his accomplishment in classic music, but for his "Lower Basin St." swing-program . . . Leo Lania, the writer who escaped from Europe and wrote "The Darkest Hour," now is on a lecture tour. His son attended one lecture, and heard Lania introduced as a man of great courage. "Dad's greatest display of courage," said the boy, "is in lecturing—with his accent."

Dr. Homer Davis Speaks

"Greece Under the Barbarians" was the subject of a lecture delivered yesterday by Dr. Homer Davis to Chevy Chase Junior College students at assembly. Dr. Davis has been with the Board of Economic Warfare since returning from Greece.

Private Bond Reserve Urged To Avert Panic

Corporations would set up reserves to meet postwar expenditures by putting 20 per cent of their income, subject to excess profits tax, in nonnegotiable, noninterest bearing Government war bonds by a plan proposed to the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday by Clinton Davidson, head of Fiduciary Counsel, Inc., a New York financial research organization.

Illustrating the main features of his plan with pictorial charts, Davidson explained his theory that the plans now being made by Federal agencies for Government participation in postwar recovery are not sound, because the national debt then will be between 150 and 250 billion dollars, enough to discourage huge recovery outlays.

Would Promote Employment

Corporate excess profits taxes would be increased to 85 per cent by the Davidson plan, with a maximum of 65 per cent, exclusive of the 20 per cent investment in nonnegotiable savings bonds. The main purpose of this reserve, Davidson explained would be to promote reemployment. The nonnegotiable bonds would become automatically negotiable and interest bearing when peace is declared.

Dr. Albert G. Hart, economics professor at Iowa State College, Ames, Iowa, opposed the growing sentiment for a sales tax before the committee, urging instead of high withholding tax on salaries and income.

The withholding tax collected at the source in the case of salaries and other individual income would raise 12 billion dollars annually in addition to the 7½ billions sought by the Treasury plan, bringing the additional tax revenue close to 20 billions, Dr. Hart said.

Rationing of staple commodities is doomed to failure unless taxes are made effective to drain off spending power, Hart contended. He cited sugar as an example. Though it is the easiest commodity in the world to ration, efforts to put a rationing plan into effect have been tried for three months without success, he declared.

Rationing Breeds Spies

"While there is spending power, there is always pressure on the rationed commodity," he said. "Even in Germany they have to have an army of spies to supervise the rationing system."

Davidson later told the committee that the greatest postwar problem would be the raising of cash to convert the factories and the providing of jobs for men left unemployed when peace is signed. Unless corporations are compelled by some device to set aside reserves to meet those demands, he said, the war will be followed by the worst depression the country has ever seen.

Representative Harry Sauthoff (Progressive), of Madison, Wis., proposed a ceiling of $75,000 a year on the income one person may receive "because that is the salary of the President, and no one in the world with the possible exception of the British prime minister, carries a comparable load at the present time." He also proposed taxing newspaper and radio advertising.

License Plates To Be Cut Down To Small Date Tabs

Future automobile license plates will be "small date tabs" not more than four square inches attached to present license plates to bring them up to date, under a War Production Board order issued yesterday.

The board prohibited the States from issuing more than 10 per cent by weight of the usual number of plates and these only for new licensees and to replace plates lost or destroyed.

Noting that it would be advisable to be sparing of metal, WPB gave notice that there was "no guarantee that the States or other local government will get sheet steel sufficient to meet the 10 per cent requirement."

The order was announced by Maury Maverick, chief of the WPB Government Requirements Bureau. He said the restrictions did not apply to metals already cut or stamped on March 18.

Tires Are Their Subject

GASOLINE RETAILERS MEET—Second in a series of luncheon meetings to acquaint operators and employes of Washington's 400 independent filling stations with tire conservation rules was held yesterday at the Hot Shoppe, 4110 Wisconsin Avenue, by the Gasoline Retailers of Washington, Inc. Harry Wainwright (right), research director of the organization, said approximately 1600 men are expected to attend the "school" before it is ended. Three sessions will comprise the course, whose objective is to encourage drivers to have their tires checked regularly, increase the number of motorists who switch their tires every 5000 miles and demonstrate the tire waste that goes with speeding. Tydings Points Out to Senators The Error of Their Ways

A people-in-glass-houses note entered the Congressional economy drive yesterday.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, inserted into the Congressional Record a table showing how much mail each Senator received for 51 days in January and February. The purpose, he said, was to "show what Senators claim they are receiving in the way of mail, and what they have actually received over a period of seven weeks."

The information would be of use to a man with some responsibility for considering how much Congress should appropriate for salaries of secretaries and clerks who handle the mail of Senators. Senator Tydings is that man.

He is chairman of the Legislative Appropriations subcommittee which in a few days will start consideration of the annual bill appropriating funds for expenses of Congress. Tydings also is chairman of a special committee now searching for places where the executive branch may make personnel, space or financial economies.

Tydings told the Senate that he hoped "to evolve a system (of apportioning clerks) which will be fair to all and which will bring the greatest amount of relief to those who have been overburdened with mail."

His statement recalled the sharp debate that developed in the Senate last year over a proposal that each Senator be allowed an additional assistant at $4500 a year. The proposal was defeated.

Tydings' table covered senatorial mail receipts from January 8 to February 28, inclusive, a period in which, he said, the mail was running a little below normal and far below receipts of the last few days when constituents by the tens of thousands have been writing on labor, the war effort and economy.

The table showed that in the 51 days, the total for all Senators was 452,710 letters.

Senator Brooks (Republican), of Illinois, led the list with 20,486 pieces of first-class mail, or an average of 401 letters a day. He was more than 33 1/3 per cent ahead of his nearest competitor, Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, who received 13,295 letters, or an average of 260 a day.

When he heard of his mail rating, Brooks quickly got out a statement pointing out that Senator Lucas, who also comes from Illinois, but who is a Democrat, was only seventh on the list with an average of 173 letters a day. The standing of the first ten on the list follows:

Senators Connally, of Texas, 219 letters a day; O'Daniel, of Texas, 204 letters; Walsh, of Massachusetts, 184 letters; Pepper, of Florida, 180 letters; Tydings, 163; Wagner, of New York, 156, and Byrd, of Virginia, 154. All are Democrats.

For the most part Senators in the first ten come from the most populous States. Tydings' State is twenty-eighth in population, however; Pepper's is twenty-seventh and Byrd's is nineteenth.

Under existing law, Senators who are not committee chairman are allowed $13,900 with no limitation on the number of clerks they may hire. The allowance for committee chairmen is higher. The 1942 Legislative Appropriation Act provided $1,618,740 for clerks to Senators and Senate committees.

NWLB Agrees Union Security Is Its Concern

The C. I. O. steel workers' union yesterday won its first test in the "Little Steel" case before the National War Labor Board when that body agreed unanimously that its jurisdiction extended to all labor disputes, including those relating to the issue of union security.

The Inland Steel Co., one of the four concerns involved in the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee demands of $1 a day wage increases and a union shop, had contended before a fact finding committee of the board that the agency had no jurisdiction over the closed shop issue.

The question was referred to the full board, consisting of four representatives of the public, four of labor and four of industry. They adopted a resolution by unanimous vote, declaring their scope included all labor disputes which might interrupt war production.

The board said its final determination in the Little Steel case—considered the crucial test in determining the pattern of future decisions on both wage demands and the union security question—would be reached after the fact-finding panel made its report and a public hearing was completed before the full board.

Inland Steel Co.'s challenge to the board's right to rule on the closed shop issue stems from a controversy which accompanied the board's creation late last December. At that time, a national gathering of industry and labor representatives agreed on all terms surrounding the formation of a mediating and arbitrating labor board, except for the union security issue, which the industry representatives insisted should not be subject to board determination.

President Roosevelt, however, ruled the other way, and ordered that the body be set up to consider and rule on all disputes.

Evening Shopping

The new Thursday evening shopping schedule is a common-sense remedy for one of the discomforts of living which has plagued new and old Washingtonians since the city began to boom. It presents an opportunity for those with no free daytime hours to do necessary shopping. It also should lighten the crush of Saturday shoppers. In many households children or employed persons need to be present when certain purchases are made. In others certain persons may not leave the house except when someone else is there to care for small children, sick, or invalid members of the family. This often means that all shopping is done on the weekend day. Night shopping is not new to the city, since many stores have used it profitably and to the convenience of Christmas customers. Thursday hours will offer a similar convenience, and those who can should use them, thus saving time for themselves and others.

Telling The Public

The Committee on War Information is to be congratulated for drawing up as intelligent and detailed a statement of the Government's news policy as could sensibly be made at this time. We all know that there are some facts which, in the national interest, simply cannot be told. But we also know that there are a great many other facts which can and should be given to the public. The committee recognizes this by pledging that every bit of war news, good or bad, which will not aid and comfort the enemy, will be released for publication. The pledge is, of course, a reaffirmation of the one broad principle which should govern the release of war information.

To be sure, for the reaffirmation to mean anything we must depend on the judgment of the men who decide what information and how much is suitable for release. But it is at least reassuring to have this promise from the committee: "Where there is conflict between consideration of public information and of military security, every attempt will be made to provide such form of publication as will inform the public while reducing the military risk to a minimum." If Government officials and censors really take this promise to heart and act on it, they will automatically ease the wasting tension that, on some occasions, has already been present and that will always be present if or when the public begins to feel that facts to which it is entitled are being kept secret.

Senator Byrd's Axe

Unlike many legislators who call loudly for cuts in Government expenditures and beat a rapid retreat when specific economy measures are proposed, Senator Byrd has the courage of his convictions. He has just outlined a program designed to reduce nondefense outlays by two billion dollars. Most of his suggestions are sufficiently specific to enable the layman to pass judgment on them. Savings of more than a billion dollars would be obtained by abolition of work-relief agencies that no longer have a legitimate excuse for existing: namely, the CCC, the NYA, and the WPA.

In the midst of a war that puts a premium on the services of youth, the CCC and the NYA have become anachronisms. And work relief of the kind afforded by WPA should, as Senator Byrd points out, be supplied by State and local governments. The latter are in a much better position to assume such obligations than the Federal Government, now staggering under a terrific burden of war spending.

The Farm Security Administration is likewise engaged in a type of rehabilitation work that should be abandoned, as Senator Byrd recommends, both for reasons of policy as well as because of the improved economic status of the farmer. The feasibility of other proposed cuts in agricultural appropriations and nondefense administrative expenses must largely be taken on faith. But Senator Byrd's recommendations are undoubtedly based upon a careful analysis of budgetary items.

Unlike some of his colleagues whose suddenly acquired zeal for economy brings demands for indiscriminate cutting and slashing of appropriations, the junior Senator from Virginia has worked long and tirelessly to bring some order into the budgetary chaos and to reduce nondefense outlays. His work received little recognition so long as the general public remained indifferent to the wasteful expenditure of public funds. But the war has brought about a great change of sentiment. People have become increasingly critical of the Administration's spending policies as taxes have mounted. They have come to realize that they have to pay for extravagances that contribute nothing to the furtherance of our war effort.

Tax Or Inflate

In opposing the general sales tax the Treasury has shifted its ground without improving its argument.

At first the Treasury said that such an impost would stimulate inflation. That was to confuse a mere rise in prices destined to absorb a sales tax with rising prices brought about by a plethora of money competing for goods. There is a world of difference between the two situations. The extent of the rise in prices due to taxes would flow to the Treasury. Rising or inflationary prices, however, would benefit only the seller of the goods bought. Insofar as a tax-induced rise in prices encouraged demands for wage increases, an impetus to inflation, to be sure, might be produced by a general sales tax. But that is no argument against it. A general sales tax to be effective in restraining inflation must go hand in hand with wage control, without which, anyway, there may be inflation.

Now the Treasury, in submitting to the House Ways and Means Committee a schedule of the yield of a general sales tax, trots out the ability-to-pay argument. It says that a general sales tax would discriminate against the low-income brackets. That is perfectly true. Those in the low-income brackets spend the great proportion of their income on goods that would be taxed in case a general sales tax went into effect. But high incomes to only a small extent would be affected, since there is saving as well as spending in these brackets. For this reason a general sales tax is to be deprecated in normal times as flouting the ability-to-pay rule, which is the basic rule of taxation.

But these are not normal times. War must be based upon the necessity of recapturing the excess of money which is released by war production. Guns and tanks and planes cannot be consumed, yet money is paid out in wages and other disbursements in connection with their output. This money has no place to go—except into higher prices. That is inflation. It is to prevent precisely this kind of inflation that Secretary Morgenthau addressed his tax bill. In his own words, taxes must be levied "so as to withdraw the greatest possible volume of purchasing power."

Where is this purchasing power? Government figures just released provide the answer. Last year total national income paid out amounted to $89,400,000,000, an increase of $13,700,000,000 over 1940. Of this increase, salaries and wages, which absorb about 70 per cent of the national income, were responsible for $10,600,000,000. That is to say, 70 per cent of this increase went into salaries and wages.

In closing the inflation gap the Government must base its tax policy on these figures. It must seek the money where the money is. Yet the Treasury's tax bill seeks almost equally to divide its income-tax levies between corporations and individuals. That is not the way to fight inflation. More money must be sought among the wage earners, if not by broadening and lowering the income-tax base, then by a general sales tax.

Wainwright's Job

The President was a full jump ahead of the Japanese in anticipating their propaganda reaction to General MacArthur's departure from the Philippines. At his press conference on Tuesday the President acknowledged that Axis agents would interpret the move to mean the virtual abandonment of the Philippines. And, sure enough, the Tokyo radio promptly broadcast just such an interpretation. Nothing, of course, could be farther from the truth.

Embattled Americans and Filipinos in Bataan will carry on. But they must carry on without the presence of the man who has become the most eminent symbol of Allied military genius. It is not exactly an enviable task which has fallen to General Wainwright, the new Philippine commander. Though General MacArthur is still nominally in charge, and though his strategy will continue to dominate the Bataan defense, it is General Wainwright who must answer for whatever happens there from now on. From all reports he is equal to the job. Indeed, he celebrated his promotion in rank by repulsing the first enemy action since March 8.

It so happens, however, that his predecessor's political genius was and is on a par with his military genius. In the Philippines, perhaps more than in many areas, political genius on the part of a commander is a useful, indeed, a necessary attribute. It helped General MacArthur acquire and hold the almost fanatic devotion of the Filipino people. And it also helped him convey to the American people the sheer fighting will and superb defensive tactics of his greatly outnumbered forces.

These are continuing assets which we cannot afford to forget, even though the major Allied front, and therefore, the major news, may shortly center in Australia. However the Japanese may exploit General MacArthur's departure in Manila and elsewhere throughout the islands, the War Department, and more directly, General Wainwright, must strive to maintain the close accord that has been built up between the fighting forces in the Philippines and the civilian populations there and here. For it is an accord that will prove invaluable later on when the time comes to drive out the invader.

Amateur Strategists

It seems that the President is a bit annoyed by the volume of advice being given him on how this war ought to be managed. Thus at his press conference the other day he cited a long passage from the historian Livy, which showed that more than a hundred years before Livy was born, the Roman leaders in general, and one Lucius Aemilius in particular, were being similarly pestered by citizens eager to chip in their two sesterces' worth on the quickest and surest way of smashing the Macedonians. Even the great Fabius, in his time, was, it appears, harassed by forum orators elaborating the theme of "Magnificent Inactivity Won't Win the War" and by demands for an immediate offensive.

This seems to prove that Rome, too, was a nation of amateur strategists. But perhaps we can take comfort in the fact that, in spite of all this, the Romans did pretty well by themselves in a military way, conquering a large part of the world, including Macedonia.

And, of course, there are instances where amateurs have been more successful than professionals. Greene, the Quaker farm boy, for example, was certainly an amateur compared to Horatio Gates, as was Nathan Forrest compared to Braxton Bragg. Moreover, most of the great innovations in military history have been the work of amateurs. The Gothic chieftains whose horsemen crushed the legions at Adrianople were certainly amateurs by Roman military standards. Danton and the other rank amateurs of the Paris Convention revolutionized European warfare by the introduction of universal conscription. And, speaking of amateurs, there are also the former pants presser Trotsky and the former house painter Hitler.

The question of whether the amateur Abraham Lincoln was wiser about the advance against Richmond than the eminent professional George B. McClellan is still being argued. But surely Mr. Roosevelt is not quarreling with that provision of the Constitution which stipulates that the supreme command of the Army and Navy must be vested in an amateur.

Much Battered Isle

The fortitude and even insouciance of the Maltese under an unending ordeal of air bombardment—in one week they had to endure about 70 raids—have been the astonishment of the world. Many explanations have been offered. But one that is seldom mentioned is that the Maltese have spent most of their long and interesting history resisting one kind of siege or another.

Geography has made Malta one of the most important places in the world. This was true even in prehistoric times, as the archeological remains attest. Because of its strategic position and its famous harbor, any power that controlled Malta pretty well controlled the central Mediterranean. Among such powers, probably, were the Minoan Cretans. The Phoenicians came there about the time of the fall of Troy, and to this day the familiar language of the island is a kind of Punic dialect. Later there were the Carthaginians, the Romans, the Byzantines, the Saracens, the Normans, the Holy Roman Emperor, the Knights, the French and, finally, the English.

But it was under those strange leaders, half monk and half soldier, the Knights of St. John, that Malta entered its most interesting and, until now, most heroic period. In 1565 occurred the "Great Siege." This ended when an attacking force of some 35,000 Turks was put to flight by the defending garrison of 6000 Maltese. A half dozen years later the Maltese galleys went off to join Don Juan of Austria to help him crush the Turkish naval power forever.

AT THE BIRD BATH

Hidden away in a secret place
The bird bath lifts a marble face.
I keep my watch near its tiny pool,
Guarded by trees, by the wind made cool.
Clear in the shallow ripples lie
A fleck of cloud, a circle of sky.
In the pale water I may see
Green shadows of wildgrass and tree.
Nothing moves and nothing sings,
But something wearing close brown wings
Is there beside me at the brim,
And silently it, too, looks in.
All in a moment it came to pass,
Bird and I, and cloud and grass,
Meet where quiet waters flow
Then on our separate ways we go.

Citizens Must Act

Wake up, Washington! We're fighting mad. A group of women, members of National Legion of Mothers of America, in our town, waited for USO to do something for the service men here. Nothing happened though I understand about $72,000 was raised here for USO. So, we started a canteen in a hall (four floors up) donated by a veteran of Spanish-American War. He paid for gas, lights, etc. The women went to local merchants and asked for soup-bones, crackers, etc. We baked cookies, cakes and doughnuts and served the service men free. The Veterans of Foreign Wars helped us. This canteen was opened January 31. On February 28, we moved to larger, ground-floor headquarters. The veterans scrubbed, built cupboards, partitions, tables and installed a donated sink. Citizens gave us furniture, rugs, dishes silverware, etc. And nine men painted the room free with donated paint. The canteen is nonprofit, the result of the generosity of our citizens.

The USO has now built a sort of "pen" in one corner of Union Depot with donated furniture and lamps, and a lounge room (I think) at Naval Training School. I've heard of nothing else.

Now Representative Priest wants all man power—possibly woman power—drafted. After watching this outfit in Washington run things, I expect chaos to result. If the Philippines are to be saved, the citizens will have to get together, build some sort of planes and ships, call for volunteers and go out to rescue them. They can't wait until next year or the next year.

Proper Compensation

While strict economy should be the watchword in connection with most nondefense expenditures, there is one item in connection with which the Federal Government should be liberal, and that is in connection with the sums to be paid to the colored people who are being evicted from their homes to make room for the new War Department Building in Arlington County.

It is not sufficient to say that many of these homes are old and run down and consequently not worth very much. The point is that these places were "home" to these people. They provided them with shelter, and when they are deprived of them they must find homes elsewhere. The question is where? Certainly not close to their former location because the price paid by the Government for adjoining ground shows that adjacent land is out of their reach. They must go into Washington or farther out in the county. At their present location they occupied a strategic position; many bus lines passed their doors. They were within 10 minutes from the heart of Washington with a 10-cent fare. They were in an area where they could find employment within easy walking distance of their homes. Just how much is it worth, Mr. Editor, to have to spend an extra half hour per day getting back and forth between home and work for the rest of your life? And figure what the difference would amount to for an entire family.

All of these things should be taken into consideration if an injustice is to be avoided. If these people are going to be required to move for the convenience of the Government, then they should not only have good modern homes to take the place of what they have, to offset their personal inconvenience, but they should have a substantial sum in addition to take care of the actual increased expense to which they will be subjected over a very long period of time.

Line Up For Victory

If the Japanese have taught us anything, it is that skillful use of even limited resources can be more than a match for even the most limitless resources which are used in a clumsy or wasteful way. In fighting and conquering, as in everyday living, the Japanese have simplified everything to the extreme. And if we are to beat them, we must strain ourselves, and our every resource. We must line up for victory from end to end, immediately.

We are at Dunkerque right now. Unless we can show such spontaneous, all-out initiative and cooperation as the British showed at their Dunkerque—acting swiftly and directly and not waiting to be told what to do—unless we can do this, our day is done, and our fate is too terrible to be put into words.

Housing Shortage

Mr. Lindley's article on the housing shortage in Washington, published last week, adds one touch of weariness to this subject.

The trouble is that room-hunters coming to Washington from be-it-ever-so-humble homes, aren't satisfied with anything within reason. They want luxurious rooms and private baths and low rents. That just isn't in the cards. Twenty years ago I paid $70 for a room in New York without bath and unfurnished. In Washington they expect to get a modern furnished apartment with bath for less than that. Most of them insist on living in the Northwest section, and overlook the fact that the most pleasant and uncongested places to live are Southeast and Northeast, where generations of Washingtonians have lived comfortably for years.

I have tried to rent a nice room in my new house in the suburbs, but these warworkers from Podunk Center want to "live near the War Department." In other words, it is the old story of the cost of high living, not the high cost of living.

Cordell Hull

It was with a deep sense of gratitude that I read in your Sunday paper, March 15, "The Fateful Role of Cordell Hull," by Juan Piedra . . . "He has never wavered in his long career as a lawyer, country judge, Congressman, Senator and Secretary of State."

Here is a statement, to which all Americans can justly and gratefully raise their voices in confirmation. It is my prayer that we may be blessed with his counsel and guidance through the crisis at hand.

It is little wonder that so noble and conscientious a gentleman as Cordell Hull should break under the strain of the momentous problems which this distinguished and faithful statesman realized involve not only the future destiny of his country, but that of his beloved fellow Americans, for whose confidence in him, by his every act and word, he has demonstrated his appreciation, respect and concern.

Uncharted Region

WPB and OPA, colossal twins, are largely jumbled together behind the Mellon Gallery in numerous, sprawling buildings which all look alike. Each of these rambling stables, one learns, has been assigned an alphabetic letter. As the Government did the assigning, the letters are not in sequence; thus Building "E" is adjacent Building "S" and "D." What kills the dog, though, is that only one structure in this entire crazy village is marked at all.

To negotiate public business in this uncharted region, a person from out of town or even from elsewhere in the Government must inquire his way every 50 paces. Even taxi drivers sometimes get lost. The thousands of man-days, Federal and private, that are now wasted, in just getting around, could be economized in any of three ways:

A. The employes later to be exhibited in "Melle's Madhouse" should each be given a striped lawn umbrella and be stationed in front of one doorway of these unmarked buildings, to answer inquiries as to what the place is supposed to be.

B. The captain of the watch in each building should be directed to mark each of his doorways with the letter of his building, three feet high in carpenter's blue chalk.

C. Best, let one of Mr. Nelson's alleged stalwarts find out who is responsible for this subtle sabotage. Then, for once, let's see some crackdown.

Offense Bonds

After Pearl Harbor we, as a Nation, had been taken unawares and were undefended, so we asked the people very rightly to come forward with all we had and buy Defense Bonds, thereby raising as much money as quickly as possible, to defend ourselves from any immediate attack whichever way it might come.

Now that that moment of danger has passed and we are now well on our way to preparedness, why not ask the Nation to buy Offense Bonds?

Has any football team ever won a game by only taking the defensive side? Could Columbus have discovered America by sitting along the shores of the Mediterranean?

Do we not know that we have troops in England and Ireland? Has not our President told us we have troops in other parts of the world?

We also know our submarines are doing magnificent work sinking enemy ships in Japanese waters and off many other foreign shores. Our airplanes are making a name for themselves in foreign lands, many thousands of miles from home. We are building tanks, transport ships, and all kinds of war material and also raising an Army to send to foreign lands as soon as possible.

I, therefore, think I feel like every other true American, that we should take the full offensive as soon as our President and his military and naval advisers consider the time has arrived when we are fully prepared to do so.

Therefore, why not now tell the people the truth and ask them through speeches, the radio, etc., to buy Offense Bonds instead of Defense Bonds? I think not only would this have a psychological effect upon our enemies but our Government would raise more money and the people would give more readily knowing that the Nation is now asking money for offense rather than defense.

The Post Impressionist

K. P.

For 11 months this soldier I know boasted of the fact that he had never done any K. P. Now, mind you, he was no shirker. He goldbricked occasionally as well as the next man. With a bit more class, I must admit. But it just so happened that his name never appeared on the kitchen police list.

Came a day, as there must to all outfits, when his organization packed up to move. Southward bound, on trains and in Pullmans, if memory serves me justly.

I remember this soldier saying: "Am I going to sleep. All day long. No 6 a. m. for me. At least not until we hit camp."

He was serious, this soldier. Also he resented being so rudely awakened in the morning. "It doesn't make any difference what time you get to bed," he would say. "Getting up at that hour kills a man."

But there was a sergeant, as there must be in all outfits, who had another idea. This sergeant also had three more stripes than my soldier friend. Need I say more?

The following catastrophic incident occurred only a few moments before our unit departed for the train. We were all lined up in formation. The sergeant stood in front of his platoon with a list of names in his hands.

He spat a flame of juice into a nearby spittoon, which instantly withered into a puddle of brass. Then he growled: "I've got to pick guards, waiters and K. P.'s for this trip." There was a leering grin on his lips, for as he said K. P. he was looking at this soldier buddy of mine.

The sergeant then read off the guards, the waiters and, in a slow monotone which sounded like the death sentence, added: "The K. P. for the trip will be . . ."

In the front line my very good friend squirmed. For some unknown and uncomfortable reason a docile and innocent expression settled over his face.

As a matter of fact, he had reason to feel so, as the position of his body plainly showed, when the sergeant called out his name. A general titter swept through the room, but my friend bore the injury with grace. Except that his knees became slightly bent. He smiled and an "Oh well! So what!" expression erased the one of docility and innocence.

He would carry this tribulation with upright pride and with courageous bearing!

On the train my friend had a few remorseful moments when he saw the redcap making up the berths. He watched soldiers undress and saw mouths yawn and heard bedtime sighs which drove him momentarily into despondency.

He dragged his weary body into the makeshift kitchen. There he saw four field ranges, now cold and unsympathetic, waiting for the crack of dawn to be lit and begin the cooking which would feed some 300 men, which would mean some 300 dishes, which would mean . . .

My very good friend slept unsteadily that night and when it was still night, 5 a. m., to be exact, he was awakened. He dressed and struggled into the kitchen and came face to face with the mess sergeant.

"Grab that sack of potatoes and start peeling," said the sergeant.

"That sack of potatoes?" my friend said.

"You heard me."

Now peeling. One potato. Two potatoes. Big ones. Small ones. Soon his hands began to crack. And soon the palms of his hands and his fingers began to look like a punctured pin cushion.

At 8 a. m. the breakfast was done. Now the dishes, a mountain of white crockery glaring down at him. At lunch there were more dishes. At supper more dishes and when they were done there were pots and pans.

"Pots and pans!" my friend said incredulously. "These things are vats! Whoever saw a pot or a pan that big!"

"Start cleaning," the mess sergeant barked unmercifully.

"Yes sir," my soldier buddy squeaked.

Pots, pans, vats, dishes, potatoes, all a horrible conglomeration of evil marching back-breakers. These are the things my friend began to see, like spots before his eyes. At 10 p. m. that night he dropped into his berth, unable to move. He could not undress. He merely lay on his back and stared up at the ceiling of the berth. The rolling train soon rocked him to sleep.

Only to be roughly aroused at 5 a. m. The story from here on is identical to the night before. And I won't repeat it except to mention that instead of potatoes there were onions this time. And it so happened that a stiff wind blew from somewhere into his face. And soon the tears streamed down his face so that he resembled a mop which had just been taken out of a pail of water.

In the afternoon the train arrived at its destination. Fortunately there would be no lunch. But now came the moving of equipment into trucks.

There were merely eight field ranges, boxes upon boxes of food, crates upon crates of oranges, apples and tangerines, a large meat refrigerator, sacks of potatoes and onions, mess utensils, dishes, knives, forks, spoons and lots more.

For the rest of the day my very good friend lugged, tugged and drugged everything but the train itself into the trucks. And when the trucks were loaded he rode along to unload them. And on it went until the last piece of equipment was finally resting in the place where it was supposed to be. Then, and only then, was he relieved from duty.

Well, I went to sleep at 6 p. m. that same night and slept a good 12 hours. And for two days I was punchy, my hands were sore, my back was bent and my eyes were droopy. But bit by bit I began to recuperate, until I felt I could write a letter. I got out paper, envelope and pen and ink and this is what I wrote:

Dear Mom:
At last I'm a soldier.
Your Loving Son,
SAMUEL ELKIN.

Today And Tomorrow

The President And Gen. MacArthur

THE ARRIVAL of MacArthur in Australia explains a great many things that have mystified the people since Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt met in Washington during the month of December. Note that the President gave the order to MacArthur on February 22. That was before the Allied naval defeat, the suicide action, in the Java Sea. Note also that MacArthur did not take command of the United Nations forces until the Navy had first established a line of communications to Australia and until American troops had been landed in considerable numbers.

LIPPMANN

Note then the time it would inevitably take to move troops across the United States and to assemble the shipping and the equipment for an expeditionary force. It is evident that this complicated operation must have been conceived and planned in the Roosevelt-Churchill conferences. This means that they foresaw with great clarity the general course of events in Malaya and in the Indies, and laid their plans accordingly. Naturally they could not say what they had foreseen and what they meant to do about it, and obviously they have been disappointed that the resistance in Malaya and the Indies was not stouter and more skillful. But it is clear now that they did not deceive themselves, and that they knew in December that in the southern part of the war against Japan the small island outposts would fall, and that the next phase would revolve about the continent of Australia and the subcontinent of India.

WITHOUT this true conception of the grand strategy of the Pacific war, it would have been impossible for the President to place MacArthur in Australia without impairing, perhaps irreparably, that very thing in MacArthur which makes him, like all the great commanders, by his mere presence a mighty force where the battle is being fought. Had the President recalled MacArthur from Bataan before Australia was in the front lines and before there were American troops in Australia for MacArthur to command, he would have been yielding to sentimental popular clamor and he might easily have destroyed the magic which in war is such an indispensable element in a great commander.

It was always highly desirable that Gen. MacArthur should be used in a much larger field than the Bataan Peninsula. But until he could go from Bataan to take command where American forces were fighting in a campaign which embraces Bataan, he could not leave his American and Filipino troops. Without the decision to make a main effort from Australia, until the Americans had landed in Australia, it would have been an appalling error of judgment to separate him from troops, to remove him from the front, and to place him in safety.

The judgment of the President, and we may be certain of the Secretary of War, has been profoundly right in this whole matter—right about the actualities of the war, right about the imponderables, perfect in manner and in the timing of the decision. They have dealt with Gen. MacArthur so as to preserve not only his life and his genius, but also to enhance his name and his influence. And no matter how much we may feel that in the mobilization at home, drastic improvements are necessary and possible, we have every right to feel that in his general grasp of the war, Mr. Roosevelt is equal to his tremendous task.

THE IMPORTANCE of having done this difficult thing so well can scarcely be exaggerated. Wars are not won only with trained troops and materials, sound strategy and ingenious tactics. Beyond all these necessities there must be commanders who become, as it were, the fountainhead of a military tradition. MacArthur has become the fountainhead of the new American military tradition, and this will mean now, as in the wars of the past, that a new line of commanders will develop from him. The officers like Gen. Wainwright who have served under him on the Bataan Peninsula, and those who will serve under him in Australia, will have an experience and will be touched with a magic that can never conceivably be acquired in training camps and in maneuvers. We can count ourselves very fortunate, as a democracy with no continuous military tradition, that the first American commander to meet the enemy should have been Douglas MacArthur. Lincoln had no such good fortune. In this most important aspect of the war, our good fortune has been better—considering our long lazy indifference to military affairs—than we could honestly say we had deserved.

THAT THE TRUE military tradition is in MacArthur we know from his glorious record in two wars, and from his immense foresight in time of peace, both here in the United States and in the Philippines. The rest of us might well try to become absorbed into it ourselves, and not be satisfied to be merely applauding spectators.

No American soldier saw more clearly or sooner than he the need for trained troops and for weapons. That need is now well understood by almost all of us, all but those who still have their own fish to fry and by the very annoying few who in their hearts wonder and calculate whether they might not go places if this country were defeated. It is certain that the country is thoroughly committed to an all-out effort. There are times, however, when it is not so clear whether we have understood well enough that in war it is equally necessary to make the most of what you have.

THIS LESSON has been demonstrated by MacArthur in the Philippines. He was outnumbered, inadequately equipped, had almost no air force, and no hope of immediate relief and reinforcement. Had he calculated his position, as for example the French generals did in 1940, he would have come to the conclusion that there was nothing to be done and that it was useless to resist.

Instead, he regarded his position as Churchill regarded the desperate British position after Dunkirk, as Stalin regarded the desperate Russian position when the Nazis were in the suburbs of Moscow. He used what he had to do more than a rational calculator would have believed possible. The capacity to do that, and above all the will to do that, is one of the things which has always distinguished the true soldier. That extra force, which the civilian does not see because it is not listed in the inventory and the tables of organization, is what at the crisis of the battle may decide the issue.

That extra force, which in war is a kind of willful self-reliance, is in most men but it does not come into action by rational argument. It comes into action when they are fighting mad—mad not only as meaning that they hate the enemy but mad in the sense also that they are bereft of their civilian habits and are out of their ordinary self-regarding minds. In this sense the heroes and the saints have all been mad with a madness that has lifted mankind above itself.

Filipino Allies

Their Enduring Loyalty

OUTSIDE of the forces fighting with Gen. Douglas MacArthur at Bataan, what is the extent of Filipino resistance in the Philippines? It must be considerable judging from the various precautionary measures being undertaken by the invaders. For notwithstanding the fact that some, not many, would-be Filipino leaders like Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, Antonio de las Alas, Pacita de los Reyes, Leon Guinto and others of their ilk have deemed it opportune to cooperate with the Japanese, it seems as if the greater part of the Filipino masses are still determined to make it as hard as possible for the enemy to exploit the man power and the resources of the islands as fuel for further aggression.

"Our soldiers in the field and the civilians behind the lines are animated by one determination and one aim—to fight the invader until death and to expel him from our land. We have suffered much and will suffer more. We will meet the enemy again and again on many battlefields. He will find us ready to defend bitterly every inch of our territory." Thus declared President Manuel L. Quezon in a proclamation to his people from his temporary capital "somewhere in the Philippines."

Indicative of this surging determination was the recent news dispatch disclosed by the War Department to the effect that the Japanese high command in the Philippines had commanded the Filipinos to surrender all their arms, including bolos, balisong (that short but nonetheless lethal knife of hard-tempered steel which is part and parcel of every man from Batangas province), and home-made guns called paltik. In all probability the Japanese are deathly afraid lest these peace-time arms be turned against them when opportunity warrants such use by the natives. And well they may be afraid. For from personal experience, I have come to learn that the people from the provinces of Laguna, Cavite, and most particularly Batangas, often fight each other unto death at the slightest provocation, earning for themselves the Tagalog cognomen 'manatay tao" (Killers). And judging them by their sensitive but explosive temperament, I strongly doubt whether these Lagunenses, Cavitenos, and these Batanguenos will hesitate or will entertain any pangs of conscience in killing these alien invaders who wreck their homes, jeopardize their lives, and who deny their liberty of thought and action. Furthermore, the Moros in Mindanao Island recently informed Gen. MacArthur that they have sworn upon the Koran "to hold our lives forfeit in fulfillment of their purpose to fight the Japanese and the enemies of the United States."

IN SPEAKING of the Moros, it may be mentioned, that it is possible, although as yet unconfirmed, that one of these Moro leaders who signed the pledge of loyalty to the United States is former Assemblyman Gulamu Rasul, a nephew of the late Sultan of Sulu and son of the late Senator Hadji Butu, of Sulu. A hadji himself by right of having made several pilgrimages to Mecca and a graduate of the National University (college of law) of Washington, he is married to a girl from Baltimore. In early 1940, he told the writer: "I wish to goodness the American people will wake up, before it's too late, to the fact that their most implacable and most embittered enemy has been and will always be Japan." Of all the Moro royalty, Rasul is not only the best educated but the very person who should know more about Far Eastern underground politics since his couriers used to go as far as Arabia and upon return used to tell about the effective propaganda which the Japanese agents had been using in the Near East, India, the Malays, and the Netherlands Indies.

In effect, the Japanese slogan of "Asia for the Asiatics" was making great inroads among the native population of those countries. "It's no longer a fight of Japan versus the United States; it's a fight of color against color, of the brown men against white men," Rasul once remarked. As he lolled on his seat at the veranda of his hotel in Manila, he recalled nostalgically his student days spent in the American capital and spoke sadly of the strange apathy which seemed to have befallen the American people. More than anything else, he treasured the memories of those Americans who befriended him during his stay in Washington. And as if he could envision the future with uncanny foresight, Rasul often expressed the wish that he had enough money—lots of it—to amply arm his numerous followers in preparation for the forthcoming showdown between the United States and the Mikado Empire. "Sufficiently armed, we Moros could really put up a stiff fight," he drily intoned.

"And for whom would you fight?" I shot back. Discomfited for a brief second or two by my query, he peered at me through his thick-lensed glasses; satisfied, he leaned back on his rattan chair, his long and aquiline Arabic nose twitching, and took long puffs at his aromatic and expensive Manila cigar. For an answer he stood up and pointed casually at his wife, who was then preoccupied brushing her blond tresses. I realized then in a small measure the utter futility of Kipling's admonition that "Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet." In that room that sultry night I knew that the East and West had met and had come to understand each other, in defiance of artificial racial barriers.

WITHOUT disparagement to the brilliant and brave people from Eire, the Moros can rightly be called the Irish of the Philippines. To them life is not worth a tinker's dam without a scrap, the fiercer the better. Of Indonesian and Malayan racial stock, converted to Mohammedanism in the early eleventh century, and even earlier, they are racially akin to their Christian brothers in the north. The over 650,000 Moros who populate the islands of Mindanao and the Sulu archipelago are wiry and sturdy, with Arabic rather than Mongoloid features; good agriculturists, expert navigators, excellent fishermen and pearl divers, skilled metal craftsmen, shrewd traders and, above all, they are like fire eaters as warriors. American veterans of the Moro campaigns can bear testimony—perhaps tangible testimony in the form of scars—that Moros, most specially those who go amok or juramentados, are not afraid of anything under the sun, much less bullets, as long as they can kill or chop off the heads of their pet hate with their long and death-dealing kampilans. Religious fanatics of the first water and recalcitrant to the point of downright stubbornness, they proved to be a thorn and a perennially insoluble problem to the Spanish, to the American and to a lesser degree, to Filipino administrations. The latter were only able to appease the Moros by giving them as much self-sovereignty as possible, of course in consonance with their ability to maintain it peacefully.

To see Moro life at its best one must go to their market places, where he will see a riot of color that is truly awe inspiring. Here he can watch the Moro girls with oval and brown-smooth faces, beautiful girls at that despite their red betel-nut stained lips, wearing black bodices that bring into relief their rounded and stiff breasts. Here, too, one can see the Moro men who strut proudly and aloof, with their tight trousers and open jackets in rainbow hues, with their turbans and fezzes, and, with their ubiquitous kampilans at their sides. For a few centavos (a centavo is half-American penny) one could buy their bronze metal wares, their primitive sculptures, their colorful hand-woven sarongs, their beautiful filigree work, and their variegated farm produce.

But what is most significant in Moro life is that one cannot fail to note the seeping and growing influence which modern civilization has upon it in all its aspects. Sultans, datos and other well-to-do Moros now ride in luxurious limousines, in Chevrolets, in Plymouths, in Fords, and in practically all cars of American make. Moro cottas or forts which had to be assaulted at the cost of hundreds and thousands of lives have slowly but steadily given way to schools, health dispensaries, public and government buildings, and to farms whose crops fast ripen under the intense tropical sun. Their houses, which jut out into the sea, are no longer the hideouts of smugglers and gun-runners. Outside of sporadic uprisings and minor revolts inspired by disgruntled individuals, by professional predatory bandits, and by escaped murderers, the Moros of Mindanao and the Sulu archipelago are today in majority law-abiding citizens who follow their respective trades peacefully, if not prosperously. For that matter, one will venture to ask, who does live prosperously in the Philippines after America had deemed it wise to close her markets to Philippine raw materials? And yet despite their poor livelihood which yields them only a hand-to-mouth existence, aggravated by what most Filipinos—both Christians and Mohammedans alike—consider a totally ungenerous American attitude adopted since 1935, the Moros pledged themselves "to fight with all our strength against the Japanese and other enemies of the United States and Philippine governments."

Nazi Spring Offensive

By Andre Visson

A Drive On Turkey Or Egypt?

ACCORDING to all latest reports from Germany the Germans appear to be convinced that Turkey is next on Hitler's list. Those Germans, however, who are believed to be well informed are not sure whether it will be necessary to attack Turkey. Very strong diplomatic "pressure," backed by sufficiently impressive concentration of Nazi veteran panzer divisions may, believe those who are close to the Wilhelmstrasse, induce the realistic and shrewd Turkish diplomats to open the borders of their country. Only should this diplomatic "pressure" fail, would the panzer divisions get the "go ahead" signal.

The Turkish diplomats are only too well aware of the danger they are going to face this spring.

When the bomb exploded a few feet from Herr von Papen there was considerable uneasiness in Ankara. The Turkish newspapers and Turkish radio were anxious to express their "joy" over the fact that the "outstanding and sympathetic German diplomat" remained alive.

THE TURKISH diplomats are, however, not only shrewd. They are also very realistic. They know that they cannot appease Hitler's ire and buy his benevolence by mere nice words. For two years they did their very best to safeguard the neutrality of their country. Last fall they sent two generals to visit Hitler on the Russian front, who signed an ingenious agreement on chrome, which without compromising immediately British and American interests in this essential war commodity, was giving Turkey the breathing spell of a year with regard to Germany. They gave the Nazis several other minor concessions. They spent all their eloquence to persuade the Nazis, the British and the Russians that the closing of the Dardanelles to all military ships was serving the particular interests of each of the belligerents. They were very happy last spring when the Yugoslav revolt and the Greek resistance upset Hitler's time-table and made him abandon his original schedule, according to which Russia and Turkey were to be attacked simultaneously in April.

But now the Turks must feel that they are approaching a crucial turn and they must ask themselves whether they will be still able to escape the showdown.

Ismet Inonu, the Turkish president, who is anything but pro-Axis—as a matter of fact he is rather pro-British—is trying to resolve a most delicate problem. He tries to remain as long as possible in this uncomfortable position in which he had been placed since last fall, his bad hearing ear turned to Germany, his right eye closely watching the Rostov and Crimea front and the attention of the other eye captured by the events on the Mediterranean coast. As long as the British control this coast from Alexandria to Alexandretta and as long as the Russians can defend Northern Caucasus, the old Turkish leader recovers the martial spirit of his gallant career. But should these two fronts crack, Ismet Inonu might listen to the advices of few Turkish pro-Nazi generals and be induced to use this diplomatic talent of his which assured him the success at the Lausanne conference in 1922.

FOR THE TIME being he is still in the watchful position. But he is getting somewhat worried over continuous Nazi concentrations in Sicily, Greece and Bulgaria. How will the Nazi planes and barges be used which have been concentrated for some weeks in all these countries?

Those which are in Sicily are obviously destined to reinforce Gen. Rommel's army in Libya. But those in Greece and Bulgaria can be used either in a combined thrust against Turkey or in two, most probably simultaneous, drives on Egypt and the Caucasus.

The Turks try to comfort themselves with the idea that 175 Nazi divisions—of which approximately 16 to 20 are said to be motorized—are still on the Russian front. The Turks still have a hope that Hitler might concentrate all his effort on the fight for Caucasian oil and leave Turkey alone.

But this hope is compromised by disquieting news from Mediterranea. In the first fortnight of February 1, Rommel's army, numbering four to five divisions, began to be reinforced and apparently prepare a drive on Egypt. In the third week of February the situation somewhat brightened. The R. A. F. won two important engagements over two convoys in Mediterranea. One of these two convoys was British, going to Alexandria; the other one was an Axis convoy bringing reinforcements to Rommel, whose lines have been withdrawn from 20 to 25 miles westward. In the last week of February it was learned, however, that General Rommel's army increased from six to eight divisions and that four more divisions—three motorized and one mechanized—were reported on the way to join him. The drive against Egypt becomes a serious danger.

This drive would not surprise the British and it would not cheer the Egyptians. King Farouk may have had some friction lately with the local British administration, but he knows that in a world dominated by Hitler there would be no place for an independent Egypt. Nahas Pacha, his new prime minister, can hardly be described as 100 per cent pro-British, but his Copt minister of finance, Makran Ebeid, who is a kind of "power beyond the throne," has been all the time on best possible terms with the British. There is really very little, if any, reason to doubt Egypt's cooperation with Britain in case of Rommel's drive in the direction of Suez.

Should Rommel's strongly reinforced army be able to realize its aims in Egypt, its successes may to a certain extent impress the Turks.

There is consequently some ground for the theory of those diplomatic observers who believe that an offensive against Egypt will proceed—and possibly make unnecessary—an offensive against Turkey.

THIS WRITER does not discount this possibility, but as far as he knows the situation and the men in Ankara he is inclined to believe that Nazi successes in Egypt alone would not be sufficient to induce the Turkish leaders to open the borders of their country to Nazi divisions concentrated in Bulgaria.

He is therefore convinced that if Hitler has really decided to strike at Egypt—and intelligence reports both from Europe and from Africa appear to confirm the probability of this theory—then Hitler will have to do his very best to strike also on the southern sector of the Russian front.

Only double Nazi successes in Caucasus and in Egypt can impress the Turks and assure to Hitler a victory in the Near East. Therefore, all this information from Germany indicating that the German armies on the Russian front will not move till June 1, in order to allow the German high command to concentrate all the effort on the Near Eastern front must be taken with more than a grain of salt and be considered a kind of classical misinformation.

Hitler's main problem this spring will be, most likely, the coordination of two drives on Egypt and on the Caucasus. And it is not an easy problem. It is impossible to have simultaneously favorable weather conditions on both fronts. It is hardly possible to open a big offensive against the Caucasus before May 1 and it will be extremely hard for European soldiers to fight in Libya and in Egypt after April 1.

This is Hitler's greatest handicap this spring and there is a fair chance that the Russian army may take advantage of these conditions which make it hard, if not impossible, for Hitler to coordinate his drives in the Near East.

The Moslem World

By Dr. George Lamsa

The Allies Should Woo Its Peoples

AN IMPORTANT question from a military and political point of view is the Moslem world. More than 150 million Mohammedans lie in the path of Japanese conquest of western Asia. Indeed, these people are a great factor in this war. They inhabit lands which sooner or later will become battle grounds. They represent wealth and man power so essential in this war. Hundreds of thousands of them are in the British armies serving on many fronts. Unfortunately many of these Moslems today are not friendly to the Allied cause. Some of them have been fighting for their freedom; others have grievances of one kind or another. This is because a large section of the Moslem world has been receptive to Axis propaganda.

IT IS imperative, therefore, to win these people to the Allied side. The British should remember the Fifth Columnists in their Malayan and Burma campaigns. I believe to a greater degree the outcome of the conflict in India and the Near East will be decided by the interests of these people. Of course, to heal the wounds and satisfy the racial aspirations of these masses of Moslems is not an easy task. This job, I believe, should be intrusted to the Americans. Generally speaking, the Mohammedans like and trust Americans and have no grievances against them. On the other hand, Arab, Hindu, Persian and Afghan Moslems mistrust European diplomacy.

Then again, the 400 million Mohammedans embrace the countries from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific. (The number of the followers of Islam is invariably given as from 250 millions to 300 millions. This is because the Moslems do not count the women.) Moreover, Islam as a religion has succeeded in unifying peoples of many races and colors. This is because Islam knows no race nor color. The people of all races and colors who have embraced it stand equal before the Almighty God. The sultan and the slave may be found worshiping in the mosque, standing side by side. This is why Moslems of all races have been willing to die for their faith.

It is true the Mohammedans go as the interests of their religion go. Geographical and racial differences stand in the background when religious differences are concerned. This is because the Moslems throughout the world are influenced by the teachings of Mohammed, the prophet of Arabia. In other words, the Mohammedans go as Arabia goes. This fact was strongly demonstrated in the World War. The whole of the Moslem world sided with the Arabs in their struggle for freedom against Turkey. Moslems in India and other parts of the world ignored the appeal from the Turkish Sultan, who at that time was the caliph or the head of the Moslem world. The Sultan appealed to all Moslems to revolt and declare "holy war" against Britain and France, who at that time were at war with Turkey. The Moslems, instead of helping the Turks, their coreligionists, sided with Great Britain in her struggle against the Central Powers. The entire Moslem world was rallied on the Arab side. Indeed, the British, through some magic or good luck, succeeded in arousing the whole of the Moslem world against the Turks and their allies.

TODAY THINGS are different. During the last conflict the Arabs were under the Turkish rule. Being a desert people they wanted to regain their freedom from the Turks at any cost. They hated the Turks, since the latter destroyed the Arabian empire. The Arabs looked on them as aliens and usurpers. This is because the Turks came from Turkistan and are not of Arab race. These were some of the reasons which made the Arabs fight sincerely and gallantly on the side of Great Britain in her effort to crush German militarism.

Now, the Arabs are pro-German in their sympathies, Axis propaganda has succeeded in undermining them and making them bitter against the British rule. They have been made to believe that they have been betrayed by Great Britain and France. They are told that their destinies lie in the Axis victory. These claims, to some extent, have been exaggerated. They were first advanced by the late Col. Lawrence and Gertrude Bell. The true facts concerning the Arab question, for one reason or another, have never been published. The truth is that Great Britain has neglected other people and races in order to please the Arabs and not to offend the Moslems in India. Britain was forced to repudiate the Balfour declaration and closed the Palestine door to the Jews in order not to offend the Moslem world.

On the other hand, today most of Arabia is free. There are about a half-dozen prosperous kingdoms in Arabia. This precious freedom was won by British blood, money and sacrifice. Thousands of British and Australian soldiers gave their lives so that the Arabs might win their freedom. Of course, the British have made many mistakes and blunders in handling the Arab question.

The Arabs want nothing short of complete freedom and a united Arabia, embracing Syria, Transjordania, Iraq and Palestine. Great Britain, for one reason or another, has found it difficult to grant Arab demands. Britain in the last war promised freedom to all races who were under the Turkish rule. Some of these Christians and Jewish minorities feel that the Arabs are not ready and capable of self-government. Since Iraq was given complete freedom in 1932 many sad things have happened to the minorities which justify their fears. The Jews are afraid they will be massacred if placed under the Arab rule. On the other hand, the Arabs mistrust the Jews. They are told that if the Jews succeed in establishing themselves in Palestine they will ultimately destroy the Arabs. Moreover, the Arabs feel that Palestine is a part of Arabia and rightfully belongs to them.

THE ARAB-JEWISH feud is as old as the Bible. Their troubles began when Joshua conquered Transjordania and Palestine, about fourteenth century, B. C. Indeed, one can easily appreciate the difficult British position relative to the Arab-Jewish question. To reconcile the Arabs and the Jews is not an easy thing. The problems involved here are religious, political and economic. Then, again, the people in that part of the world are like camels—they never forget. Simple and sincere as they are, once deceived and betrayed, they never trust again. Such is the Jewish and Arab problem, and such is the task the British are facing in that part of the ancient world.

The Arabs and the Jews are members of the same race. Their religions and customs sprang from the same origin. Both people believe in the same God and call themselves the children of Abraham. Both the Arabs and the Jews are monotheistic in their belief. The Arabic and Hebrew languages are closely related. There is much of common ground between them.

When the Arabs and the Jews drop their racial aspirations, forget the past, and work in the interests of their race, their differences and difficulties will be overcome, and they will learn to love one another.

The help of experts and well versed agents who are familiar with Jewish and Arab history and their racial background should be enlisted toward that end. Such men can enlighten the people and warn them of impending disasters which confront them, for if the Axis should win the war their lot might be far worse than it is today. The Jews must have a place where they can go. On the other hand, the Arabs should be assured of their political and economic security. The Arabs, being a simple and desert people, fear they cannot compete with the European Jews.

Besides the Arab-Jewish question there are other things to be studied—the Turkish-Arab differences and mistrust. The British and Turkish alliance has made the Arabs know well that if Turkey should decide to enter the war on the side of the Allies, Britain will be forced to promise her the return of some of the territorities which she lost in the last war. Thus the return of Syria and Iraq to Turkey will end the Arab hopes for freedom and unification of Arabia. The cedence of Hatay (a province north of Syria) by France in 1939 seems to justify the Arab fears.

Evidently the Moslems in this war will side with the Arabs, especially Egypt and other Arab independent countries. The Turks to some degree have abolished religion and are indifferent to the teachings of Islam. Since the fall of the Caliphate the Moslem world looks to Arabia and Egypt for leadership and guidance in religious matters. Today as things stand, the Turks have the greatest dilemma in their history. They are confronted with a difficult situation. They do not know which side to take in this conflict. They are between the devil and the deep blue sea. They have seen nation after nation conquered. They know well that nowadays guarantees and assurances are not worth the paper on which they are written. They know that the Axis powers need all the lands they can get. Their future is in doubt. Turkish diplomats know it is easy to promise while the war is going on, but hard to fulfill their promises after the war when the victors are busy and quarreling over the spoils.

AMERICAN SUBMARINE SEALION—THE ENEMY WON'T HAVE A CHANCE TO USE HER

Sub Missing—Two Vessels Demolished

COMDR. SHANE

Overdue in the western Pacific for more than a month, the American submarine Shark "must be presumed to be lost," the Navy announced yesterday. Lieut. Comdr. Louis Shane, jr., of Tacoma, Wash., was in command of the undersea fighter.

In the same communique the Navy told how the destroyer Stewart and the submarine Sealion had been demolished to prevent their use by the enemy in event of capture. The Sealion, launched in May, 1939, as rescue work was under way on the sunken submarine Squalus, had been damaged at Cavite. The Stewart, an old World War I "four-stacker," was damaged early this month at Sourabaya. There were no casualties in these two cases.

Salamaua, New Guinea Gold Port

Salamaua, one of the two places on the northern coast of New Guinea, where Japanese soldiers have landed, was the "gold port" of New Guinea, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"Situated on a narrow peninsula, the town rose rapidly in 1926 when gold was discovered some 40 miles inland. The settlement was then merely a cluster of tents and shacks made of palm leaves. On the inner fringe was a straggling group of native huts against a background of coconut palms which separated the settlement from a malaria-breeding swamp.

"At the same time Wau became a boom town at the inland site of the gold fields, 6000 feet above the sea. An impenetrable jungle separated the port and the gold diggings. Airports were built at both Salamaua and Wau. Not only passengers, but building materials, automobiles, cattle, dredging and electric machinery (the latter piece by piece) were flown inland over the jungle.

"Several million dollars worth of gold was brought out by air each year from the Wau mines. Gold is the principal export of the territory of New Guinea, with coconut products valued at less than one-third of the gold production.

"The modern town of Salamaua is administrative headquarters for northeast New Guinea. Although unexplored areas peopled with semicivilized tribesmen lie only a few miles inland, peacetime Salamaua had attractive homes, hospitals, hotels, stores and government buildings, schools and churches, power plant and wireless station.

"In 1938 when volcanic eruptions made it necessary to abandon Rabaul, then the capital, on nearby New Britain Island, Salamaua was chosen by the Australian government as temporary capital of the mandated territory of New Guinea. Later it gave way to Lae.

"The coast line of northeastern New Guinea is little broken, and has few good harbors. The Salamaua harbor, however, affords good anchorage and shelter for the largest vessels."

ENEMY HIT IN VITAL AREA—This is part of the vast expanse of land and water that is fast becoming the major battle ground of the Far Western Pacific war—the north and east coasts of Australia, the numerous islands, an area of vital ocean supply lines, an area that includes most of Australia's population and wealth. American and Australian air forces, it was announced by the Navy yesterday, smashed a Japanese invasion force concentrated in the Salamaua-Lea area (A) with the sinking or damaging of 23 vessels, 12 of them warships

Land of Gold And Savages

Complete conquest of New Guinea by the Japanese would give the invader possession of the world's second largest island, says a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

Southern New Guinea is only 100 miles from Australia's sparsely settled northern coast. And eastern New Guinea, curving into the Coral Sea, is only seven hours from Sydney as the bomber flies.

New Guinea ranks next to Greenland in size. It spreads over 250,000 to 300,000 square miles of the southwest Pacific. The western half normally is administered by the Netherlands Indies, the east by Australia. Australia's share is subdivided into Papua and northeast New Guinea Territory.

Before the first World War, the Northeast Territory was known as Kaiser Wilhelm's Land. Australia seized it from the Germans in 1914, and received a postwar mandate. Papua, once a British Crown possession, was turned over to Australia in the early 1900's.

New Guinea has been called the last stand of Stone Age Man. Although scientists and fortune hunters have trod its mountains and jungles, the interior largely belongs to the headhunter and cannibal.

New Guinea holds more than an estimated million natives. They range from pygmies to near-giants, from blacks to deep tans. Most familiar is the Negroid "Papuan" type — long, bushy hair, scar-decorated body, shell and tooth necklace, feathered headdress, bones worn crosswise in the nostrils.

Some nomadic tribes live almost as simply as wild animals; others reside in relatively advanced communities.

Many Papuan houses are built on piles or in trees. The grass-thatched tree house is reached by a long ladder. The tree dweller is likely to feast on yams, rice, corn, sugar cane, bananas, breadfruit or sago-palm flour.

Before the war in the Pacific, the whites in New Guinea numbered six to seven thousand. They were planters, mining employes, traders, or missionaries.

Brave Veteran Completes School's Nutrition Project

By Gerald G. Gross

ENID SMITH ALYMER SMITH RUTH SHELDON

A mere man among several women, Alymer Smith paid diligent attention in cooking class yesterday and came away with a recipe for light, tasty oatmeal cookies which require not one grain of sugar.

It took place at the third and final session of Jefferson Junior High School's nutrition project.

"I didn't miss a single day," Smith said with pride as his pretty 13-year-old daughter, Enid, looked on approvingly.

A disabled World War veteran, Smith cooks and keeps house at 1019 C Street Southwest for his wife, a Government employe, and two daughters.

"Been doing it for seven years and like it fine," he said. "Before the World War I was a cafe cook, you know. By the way, my first name is spelled sort of funny but just pronounce it Elmer."

On Monday, Tuesday and again yesterday, he attended the food demonstrations given in the Jefferson Auditorium by Miss Ruth Sheldon, sponsored by the school's nutrition committee. Around him each afternoon sat nearly 300 mothers and home economics students, all come to learn how luscious menus can be produced from modest budgets.

At the cooking demonstrations, Smith—and the female contingent — learned how to turn out such low-cost delicacies as peanut chops (rye bread coated with peanut butter and eggs), skillet stew and rice-onion tidbit called Turkish pilaf.

Mrs. Elsie H. Davidson, chairman of Jefferson's nutrition committee, said an important factor in making the school demonstration a success was the penny milk program, which has been in operation at Jefferson since the Washington project was launched on January 5.

Hollywood And the War

Hollywood, March 19 (Wide World).—A movie cameraman remarked the other day that he'd finish the picture he was shooting in two weeks—if the rubber tires on his rolling camera "dolly" held out that long.

Seriously, though, the automobile shortage is going to hit Hollywood as much as any place in the country.

Hollywood—that is, the movie studios—actually is scattered for 5, 10, 20 miles all over Los Angeles, geographically one of the biggest towns in the country and hence one of the automobile-ingest towns in the country.

Most people, however, are driving merrily away, oblivious to the possible car-less morrow, evidently figuring they might as well go on driving while they have the chance, the rubber and the gas.

A few are taking to bicycles. One of them is Gail Patrick, who pedals to and from his studio location.

The incinerator men on the movie lot who used to spend all their time burning up old sets and properties are practically victims of technological unemployment. The movies aren't throwing things away these days.

They know that if they don't economize on wood, metals, and film, they may run out of them.

There is considerable apprehension that there may be a shortage of film because some of the chemicals that go into it are used in munitions.

So the studios are streamlining their production schedules and using new stratagems to reduce the amount of film shot.

One important method of making such economies is using cameras on booms.

Movie big shots are serving as air-raid wardens and holding first-aid classes in their homes. One of the best first-aid instructors is Lew (Dr. Kildare) Ayres.

Read All About The Lady Who Lost 14 Sizes

By Ida Jean Kain

WHEN you hear of someone losing in the neighborhood of 100 pounds, you must wonder how she gets along later. Does she feel as well after the excitement of being slim has worn off? Is she as pleased with her new figure? Does it last?

A Canadian reducer, about whom I have told you before, seems to answer any such questions that might arise. Perhaps you recall her. She first took off 80 pounds and brought her weight from 220 pounds to 140 while going right along with all the hard work of a rugged frontier life. I nominated her "the most courageous reducer of 1940" and said that with only 10 more pounds off her weight would be perfect. At that time, her doctor told her she looked a good 10 years younger, and had greatly improved her health.

Now we have another chapter to her story. She writes:

"Here I am again. I want to tell you how easy it has been to keep my weight normal for the past two years and that I have had excellent health. My weight is 127 pounds" (she lost 13 pounds more, bringing the total up to 93 pounds!) "and my size is a 16, which is quite a change from the size 48 at which I started reducing."

Appetite Struggle

And if you are having a constant struggle with your appetite, read this:

"When I weighed 220 pounds, I simply couldn't leave pie, cake and candy alone. Now I very seldom take any. I just don't care for them. I have a simple breakfast—citrus fruit, toast and tea; a luncheon with plenty of fruits and vegetables and a good dinner. I love my whole wheat bread. I certainly feel fine. I am never sick."

This slimming program was accomplished under the most difficult circumstances that can be imagined. It was imperative that the reducer keep feeling fit as she does a great deal of rigorous outdoor work. Because she lived in such a remote part of the country, her menus were more limited than is usual. But by using canned fruits and vegetables, the latter with the liquid in which they were canned, cheese, eggs, canned meats and whole grain cereals, she was able to follow a protective diet.

In contrast to the average woman who likes to think housework is sufficient exercise, our energetic Canadian did her housework, helped to cut 30 cords of wood and did considerable other heavy outdoor work, and, with all that, did specific calisthenics every day. As a result, she trimmed down from a size 48 to 34—a difference of about 14 sizes.

Average Woman Soft

This story shows a lot of things: That the average woman is a softie, that your health is improved and you grow younger on a good diet, and that it is no trouble to keep slim because you learn to like the protective low calorie foods.

Mother of Four Children Challenges Woman's Statement That Birth Control and Divorce Are Interlocking Evils, Undermining Society

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Although I am a faithful reader of your column, I often disagree with the views set forth by some of your opinionated correspondents. But I have never been quite so aroused as I am by a letter signed, "W. W. M.," published in your column of March 15, in which she condemns birth control as the root of all modern social evils. She says: "To a real Christian, the doctrine of birth control is downright revolting. The teaching of Margaret Sanger, with its unpleasant sulphuric stench, has gone 'round the world—to make its believers not only weak and neurotic, but positively immoral, human beings."

What a biased utterance! I am a great advocate of birth control. And before I go any further, let me say that I am the mother of four lovely children. I have given my time and energy to working in birth control clinics in several States over a period of years, and I heartily suggest that "W. W. M." try doing the same. If she would get out and see the real suffering, the disease and privation, caused in families by uncontrolled propagation, her very narrow outlook on life might begin to broaden—to the extent, at least, where she would be somewhat more diffident in advancing her views.

How can it be right for securely placed members of society to sit smugly aloof, while poverty-stricken couples produce 10 or 12 children, in sheer helpless ignorance, when they can only afford the necessities of life for two or three children at most? "W. W. M." says: "There are two great putrid cancers gnawing at our national life today. One is birth control and the other is divorce. And our divorces would be fewer if artificial birth control were shunned by women. If there are reasons why we must limit the size of the family, why not achieve that objective by self control?"

Is "W. W. M." so naive, or so frigid, or so little acquainted with human nature, as not to know the psychic—yes, and spiritual—importance of true matehood in marriage? Does she not know that such "family control" as she advocates has driven many a man away from home—either into an affair with a more responsive woman; or, worse yet, to those degrading institutions which commercialize emotional need? Loving means giving; and for a wife who really loved her husband, it would be impossible to say: "No, Henry, dear. We must wait another two years before we can give ourselves to each other!"

Knowledge of Life Tempers Viewpoint

"W. W. M." should get out into the world and see what's going on. She might revise her opinions about what's wrong with it. As for divorce being a cancer, gnawing at society—I think she has her metaphors mixed. Certain disordered relationships may have a cancerous effect upon the individual personality—and divorce is a kind of social surgery which offers the only hope of relief. For instance, my parents-in-law have lived together in the same house for 30 years; but for the past 12 years they have not spoken to each other. What effect do you think this has had upon them and their children? The effect has been disturbing in the extreme.

Don't you agree with me that they would have been better off if they had found the courage to separate years ago, when they would have been young enough still to rebuild their lives and develop into happy and useful citizens? Today, they are two miserable, discontented, disliked old persons. I have known several wonderful women who had recourse to divorce; and who thereafter started new lives and accomplished worthwhile things; whereas had they remained married, they probably would have become ailing, neurotic parasites.

More power to the person who dares to turn over a new leaf after seeing his mistake. I have unlimited faith in the younger generation, which dares to break with old taboos in charting a fruitful life. I believe them to be clear thinking, level headed youngsters, who are as eager to give a good account of themselves as ever we were; and who enter into marriage with equal seriousness and determination to succeed. But if their best efforts come to naught, they have the sense to realize that you cannot correct a mistake by persisting in it—and so they start over again.

In closing, I suggest that "W. W. M's" pronounced lack of kindness, humane understanding, charity and real desire to be of help to her fellowmen automatically disqualifies her for moral leadership, at present. And I propose that she correct these defects in her outlook before passing judgment on the other fellow. But when (and if) she does so, I imagine she will find that this is a pretty good world, after all; with most people doing the best they can, according to their light. Sincerely,

M. A. M.

Uncurbed Propagation Gave Rise to War Lords

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Although in accord with "W. M. W.'s" main exhortation, in favor of putting more faith in divine guidance, I cannot follow her line of reasoning to the extent of denouncing Margaret Sanger and birth control. "W. W. M." goes so far as to say, "There may be reasons why God sees fit to visit us with the scourge of war! Marshal Petain said, upon the fall of France: 'Too much pursuing of pleasure! Too few children!'"

In other words, she suggests that God may be punishing us for practising birth control. But does this make sense?—when you consider that the leading advocates of war, those primarily responsible for the present world-wide murderous aggression, the warlords of Germany and Japan, are justifying their hideously promiscuous slaughter and maiming on the argument that they need more room to live in?

They must expand, so they furiously tell us, because they have had too many—not too few—children! And was Marshal Petain deploring birth control from the moral angle?—or merely because it had resulted in a shortage of cannon fodder on his side of the Maginot Line? Sincerely,

R. T. H.

Natural Lines, Simple Backgrounds, Designer's Creed

Typical of Eisenberg designs is this original creation, above, featuring natural shoulder and waistline technique. It is a beautifully cut casual classic of rayon crepe strategically shirred at the shoulders and made with modified dolman sleeves —an Eisenberg fashion prediction several years ago.

Classic Wearable Styles Best, Says Harold Eisenberg

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor

AMERICA, within the last two years, has become a fertile and fruitful field for fashion designers. Even European designers who have "escaped" to this country say they never want to "go back," except for a visit.

This turn of events has given every person designing here in America a break. Many young designers have hurdled the long pull once necessary to win recognition. Especially noteworthy, however, are the American designers who, over a period of time, have kept right on designing clothes for American women, in America, with the American woman's activities in mind—regardless of what Paris was doing.

For American Women

Two of the designers who have gone right on in their own quiet way are the Eisenberg brothers, makers of Eisenberg originals in Chicago. For 20 years these creators have stood by American women, giving them easy-to-wear clothes, with natural tailoring touches, hand-finished details and beauty of line—facsimiles of frocks that might be made by your personal dressmaker.

The creative genius of the firm, Harold Eisenberg, with his advance summer collection, will be at a local store until 9 o'clock tonight (in accordance with the new 12:15-9 hours on Thursday only (for the benefit of Government girls). Mr. Eisenberg's summer collection will bear out his belief in perfect classics—dresses as casual as they can be and still wearable day after day, year after year.

Natural Lines

Mr. Eisenberg has always stood for natural waistlines and natural shoulders, with no tricks or bows, but good lines that do things for the American figure. His clothes are perfect background pieces, especially for exquisite Eisenberg jewelry, which is designed exclusively for each costume.

Four years ago when I went through the Eisenberg establishment I was especially impressed by the jewelry—massive clips and pins with luscious stones and "white ice." These pieces, added to a dress with simple lines, make a creation chic and stunning. (It's the old idea of the basic dress coming to the fore again. A background dress with jewelry or frothy lingerie touches is still indispensable and appealing to Washington matrons.)

Raw Vegetables

We are moving forward into spring which means an array of vegetables at lower prices. All winter we have been cooking our vegetables with as little water as possible, so that none of their nutrients will be lost. Now let's try eating our vegetables raw, for virtually all vegetables have some vitamin C which may be lost in cooking.

Entering a restaurant recently I noticed that one of my men coworkers was eating raw carrot sticks. He is the type that always has plenty of energy and a healthful glow. So that sent me on the trend of thought about other vegetables which may be eaten raw.

Raw vegetables, besides lending crispness and variety to the diet, have other vitamins present than vitamin C. And don't store your vegetables for days in the refrigerator; use them as soon as possible after bringing them from the market. Of course, keep them fresh in the refrigerator vegetable pan until the hour of preparation. Don't soak vegetables for a long time.

Chopped vegetable salads should be prepared immediately before serving time. And speaking of chopped vegetables there's more than cabbage and carrots to be chopped into a salad. Try some of the following ideas:

It's Spinach—Use the tender center leaves of raw spiach. Combine with chopped, hard cooked eggs and finely cut anchovies, dressing all with oil and vinegar.

A Different Mixture—Shred the flowerettes of cauliflower and combine with diced orange, with chopped green pepper and with diced celery for a salad with a difference.

A Shreded Medley—Shred red cabbage with grated carrot, sliced pepper, chopped celery, and tart apple, all mixed and blended with mayonnaise.

Mock Salmon—Raw grated carrots, minced green pepper, celery, onion and sliced ripe olives. Pass your favorite dressing if desired.

Bedroom of 1942 Should Be Restful, Sympathetic and Cheerful

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

WE ARE going to be needing all the fortitude we can muster during the coming months or even years. And the place we'll find that—if we are lucky—will be at home . . . and most of all in our own bedrooms where we retreat to gather courage, to think things through, to get our bearings. That's a lot of responsibility for any one room to have! Make it as sympathetic and restful and restoring a room as you can—put your refurbishing allowance on it instead of on the living room if you must make a choice.

The First Point

In suggesting ideas for bedroom decorations, we're going to begin with a check-up of comfort and utility. The bed is the first point—a good innerspring mattress and preferably a box spring will guarantee good rest. Next comes adequate light—not those pretty dinky little boudoir lights but a bigger three-way lamp for adequate illumination of the entire room. Spacious drawer space is needed too—a highboy is grand in a bedroom . . . so are two unit chests set together with a single long horizontal unframed mirror above them. For a mirror is also necessary in a really comfortable bedroom. If your chest doesn't have a big enough mirror, plan to have a big wall mirror—a shelf built under this with a skirt added makes an attractive dressing table.

You'll want good places to sit—one or two small upholstered chairs, or else a chaise longue or a love seat will make the room gracious and livable. Don't forget to add some convenient small tables—not too small either . . . they're as useful here as in the rest of the house. You may find that you'll want your desk here—if so, get an adequate one.

A rug is a "must" for a bedroom, as far as we're concerned. It adds warmth and friendliness. Scatter rugs will do, though we prefer the idea of a big room-size rug if it can be managed. The windows want to be curtained for both light and dark, so that sun and air can cheer the room by day, and yet so they can be darkened for naps or night. Sheer curtains and draw-type draperies are a good solution—so are good window shades in combination with sheer curtains or with chintz draperies if you like them better. In planning new curtains, consider blackout linings.

Friendly Effect

When you have accounted for these essentials you can then go on to the matter of colors and effects. In planning colors, be sure to have restful favorite colors, and in planning effects, keep to simple ideas.

PALE GREEN is probably the most satisfactory bedroom color there is—it's restful and yet fresh looking. Use it with jonquil yellow and white. Or with lavender to mauves. Or with pink and maroon. Or with firecracker red. Or with cream, beige and brown.

BLUE though is still our favorite. Pale blue with wine reds is very smart. Blue with orchid and gray is subtle and provocative. Blues in several shades with beige is interesting. Blue with pink and white is young and sweet. Blue with yellow and brown is sophisticated. Blue with old rose has poised charm.

PINK has many loyal followers. It can be dramatic with browns or cocoas. It can be gentle and demure with orchid and gray. It can be insouciant with cream and mauve. It can be soigne with all-white. It can be buoyant with shades of aqua to turquoise.

Accessories should be important . . . far too many dinky oddments are dumped into bedrooms. Have fewer things of bigger size and more interesting subject. Some facilities should be made for books, since most people have little time for reading except in bed. And a small bedside radio is pretty nice. An electric clock is an all-but-necessary, and we like a flashlight, a pencil and pad and calendar at hand.

Correct Speech, Aid to Success

"MAY BE I can put myself ACROST with the REAL nice crowd in the office," she thought when she got the job. But the "REAL nice crowd" gives her the cold shoulder.

If your English is faulty, alas, you won't be asked to lunch by the boss' third cousin—much less by the boss' son. Socially and in business, they prefer girls who say "VERY nice" and "ACROSS" (no "t"). So check your English—you can't be too sure! Here's a start:

Do you say "CAN'T hardly" or "CAN hardly"? "He DON'T" or "He DOESN'T"? "THEIRSELVES" or "THEMSELVES"?

And do you prefer "If I HAD HAVE known" to "If I HAD known"? "He DARESN'T do it to "He DOESN'T DARE"? "THOSE kind" to "THAT kind"?

In each case the first phrase is wrong, the second is correct. But if you were wrong a time or two, don't be discouraged—a little practice gives the "correct" habit.

Also a little checking and practice keep you straight in the use of similar words. Then you won't say "He ALLUDED his enemies," for you know "ALLUDE" means "refer to." You say "ELUDED his enemies"—escaped them.

Brazilian Prince and Mme. Fonseca Share Honors at Embassy's 'After 6' Fete

"No, no! The party's not for me. It's for him!" And pretty Lucia Fonseca nodded in the direction of a tall, handsome man who stood in the doorway with her mother, Mme. Martins.

The young man in question was H. I. H. Prince Dom Joao de Orleans e Braganca, grandson of the last Emperor of Brazil; and as he stood there chatting with his hostess, feminine hearts were a-flutter the length and breadth of the spacious dining room where yesterday's company collected and lingered until dinner time.

Writing a hasty paragraph the other day I referred to Dom Joao as Dom Pedro; confusing him with his elder brother, the unpretentious pretender to the nonexistent throne of Brazil . . . Both, of course, are grandsons of the last Emperor of Brazil, Dom Pedro II. . . . Neither has any political aspirations, and both work hand-in-glove with Brazilian President Getulio Vargas who, incidentally, lives in the palace that once belonged to Dom Joao's grandfather.

Mme. Fonseca

Dom Joao came to this country some time ago—sent by his government, so I understand, to inspect West Point and Annapolis, and to make a detailed report back to Rio . . . Dividing his time between Washington and New York, with side trips here and there, of course, he has been a popular figure in younger-set goings-on around here for some time . . . But I understand rumors of romance swirling around him recently are just that, and nothing more—rumors, I mean.

Anyway, so far as I could make out, yesterday's "after 6" get-together at the Brazilian Embassy was a double fete at which the prince and Mme. Fonseca shared equal honors . . . The latter, who came here only a few days ago, is already busy at a Portuguese translating and press job in Nelson Rockefeller's office . . . She's to be here indefinitely; loves it here already, and in a short space of time has made friends on all sides.

Four "Wrens" Among Those Present

Looking like her daughter's sister, Mme. Martins received in the drawing room of the embassy, and had standing with her Dom Joao. Her spring print frock was set off with a couple of colorful bows perched atop her black hair . . . Mme. Fonseca who, like Ambassador Martins, mingled in the company and seemed to be everywhere at once, also had chosen a spring print frock, and—like mama—had a pretty bow in her hair.

"I'm simply enchanted with the prince!" said engaging little Audrey Jones, who arrived at the party with her grandmother, Mrs. Jesse Jones . . . The Secretary of Commerce came in later to join them, but I believe by that time the two were already en route to another party . . . Anyway, I know that Audrey was slated to be on hand early for a buffet supper in her honor. Hostesses were Sue Vaughn and Dorothy Wilson, nieces of Mrs. Will Clayton.

Men in uniform, and women as well (yes, I spotted three "Wrens," members of the Women's Royal Navy Service, in the company) furnished the patriotic accent for the fete . . . Several members of the Diplomatic Corps were among those present; and, as usual, at Brazilian Embassy parties, members of the staff were well represented in the crowd. The Brazilian First Secretary was there with his pretty wife, Mme. de Alencastro-Guimaraes, who is a gracious addition to any get-together—and especially so, at an evening party when she brings her guitar along with her and sings a series of lively airs.

Mme. de Alencastro-Guimaraes

En Route to Other Parties

Hugo Gouthier, who numbers his friends by the dozens, was there with his beautiful wife, and both were busy every minute, seeing that everybody met everybody else . . . Mrs. Adolf Berle chatted with the Minister of Uruguay and Mme. Blanco . . . Senora de Cardenas was there; also the French Counselor and Mme. Georges-Picot, the latter saying she simply had to leave "in time to get to my Chinese lesson" . . . Recently returned from a Florida sojourn, Dr. Eugene de Savitsch was there and still others I saw included Mrs. Eugene Carusi, Mme. Wennerberg of the Swedish Legation; Mrs. Nelson Rockefeller, Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, Mrs. Nathan Wyeth, Mrs. F. Moran McConihe, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Beall Gwynn, Miss Ruth Hurley, the Drew Pearsons and many more.

Several of those present, including Mrs. Robert Pell, went on to the cocktail party Andre Visson was giving in honor of William L. Shirer, and still others left in time to get dressed for Mrs. Randall Hagner's dinner.

Whispers and Drumbeats: Which well-known husband-and-wife writing team is scheduled to terminate soon by the Reno route? . . . And that reminds me of Senator Pat McCarran's widely quoted quip about his home State's most famous town, "It's the only inland city in the world where the 'tieds' come in and the 'untieds' go out" . . . Which Latin-American embassy chatelaine will be buying a bassinet before long? . . . Which two post-debs, each belonging to a prominent Washington family, will become brides-elect by official announcement on Sunday? . . . And do you know the name of the social-registerite who purchased an expensive transformation at a local beauty shop; wore it for weeks, but refused to pay for it in full until the matter was turned over to a lawyer?

Mariana Evans Wins Wings as 'Victory Girl'

They are the insignia of her title of "Victory Girl," with which she was crowned recently at the thirteenth annual dance of the Simmons College News, the undergraduate newspaper. Simmons College girls had volunteered to "Keep 'Em Flying" by "enlisting" a victory girl in the United States Flying Forces during their dance in the main ballroom of the Copley-Plaza Hotel in Boston, Mass.

According to a report from Boston pretty, blonde Miss Evans was "overwhelmingly surprised" when Ensign David Robinson, of Chicago, representing the Navy Air Corps, presented her with the silver wings at the dance Saturday night. Martinu. It was an "after concert" affair starting at 10:30 o'clock. Earlier guests attended the concert at the Sulgrave Club, where Constance Russell, pianist, and Lucien La Port Kirsch, violinist, played a number of pieces written by Mr. Martinu, who is a well known Czech composer.

Mr. and Mme. Martinu are guests at the Legation for several days. They have come down from New York, where they are living now after spending many years in Paris. His musical pieces were introduced into this country by Koussevitsky, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Mr. Martinu received the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge prize several years ago for one of his compositions.

The honor guests received with the Minister and Mme. Hurban in the drawing room, which was adorned with spring flowers. Snapdragons and fresia sprouted from the vases and tulips in rosy shades were placed effectively about in low bowls. Mme. Hurban had donned an electric blue frock of taffeta with a wide skirt and a bodice fashioned off the shoulder.

There were many diplomats attending last evening's gala reception. The Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun were there, as were the Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Mrs. Wedel Discusses Youth and War Before Members of D. C. Zonta Club

MRS. THEODORE O. Wedel, wife of Canon Wedel of the Washington Cathedral, declared yesterday, "Youth is the product of modern education." Speaking before the members of the Zonta Club's luncheon meeting at the Y. W. C. A., Mrs. Wedel continued, "Youths have been taught to be critical, to question, to analyze and to think for themselves. They prefer that the Government tell them the truth about present-day conditions.

"Today's youth will build the post-war world," she explained. "Therefore, it is important that this youth be helped through the critical war period."

Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel

In discussing the "Nation's Youth at War," Mrs. Wedel pointed out that the war upset careers, marriages and all future plans. This, she asserted, brought forth many youth problems.

"For one thing," she said, "today's youth has grown up in a youth-conscious world where rights and privileges, and not duties, were emphasized. During the war, youth cannot be put in the center of the stage. To aid them in taking a back seat, as it were, we must give them sympathy and understanding."

Youth today needs a stabilizing influence, the speaker pointed out. "But adults themselves need to be sure that they are stable," she explained. "They must mature and know where they are going in order to help the young people."

Mrs. Wedel blamed the lack of stable homes—homes broken up by divorce and economic factors—for the instability of youth. Return to religious beliefs and the encouragement of youth groups like the Girl Scouts, Campfire Girls, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., she thinks, are important steps toward establishing firm foundations for young people.

How to Make Your Husband Eat

IF YOUR husband refuses to eat green vegetables, you can mark it down he's a grown-up problem child. So declared Martha Ellyn, Post food editor, speaking yesterday at a luncheon meeting of the Young Married Women's Club of the Y. W. C. A. Martha Ellyn pointed out wives could persuade husbands to get their green vegetable equivalents by serving vegetable juice cocktails and other foods with the same vitamins.

The Young Married Women's Club, composed of young matrons, is a get-together place for newcomers. Although the club doesn't go in heavily for civic projects, it does contribute money and time to defense. Mrs. Francis Petrola, jr., president of the club, presided at the meeting yesterday.

Mrs. Francis Petrola, jr.

In advising the club members on wartime entertaining, The Post food editor pointed out that the present trend is toward simplicity. "Food," she said, "should be well cooked, simply served with good taste and imagination. Also it should present a pretty picture. Have a definite theme or motif.

"Don't wait until the last minute to dispatch the husband to the corner store for flowers," she warned, "and have him return with flowers that do not harmonize with the color theme."

Maritime Jobs Open To Women

THE UNITED STATES Maritime Commission can employ all the women engineers and architects that the colleges can train, according to Guy E. Needham, director division of personnel, U. S. Maritime Commission.

Scheduled to speak before the Conference of War Demands for Trained Personnel Workers, sponsored by the Institute of Professional Relations, beginning tomorrow at the Mayflower Hotel, Mr. Needham pointed out in an interview yesterday that the U. S. Maritime Commission for the first time in its history now offered special employment opportunities for women. He attributed the opening up of new jobs to war conditions and the shortage of men.

Need Secretaries

In addition to the need for women engineers and architects, Mr. Needham said that the commission could use secretaries and stenographers as well as clerks.

"Colleges should give more consideration," he said, "to placing emphasis on vocational training for women. A girl should have some business school training in order to do the most rudimentary office job."

Mr. Needham deplored the fact that women with college degrees who are eager to contribute to the defense effort could not be utilized because they lacked business training.

Five thousand private firms that are prefabricating parts of ships for the Victory Fleet have jobs that can be done principally by women. Also, he explained, "there are the usual clerical and administrative positions in the manufacturer's office." Shipyards also have openings for office jobs.

Chance For Future

"Those women who get into the broad fields of water transportation and related fields now and establish themselves as competent, reliable employes," said Mr. Needham, "during the trying days of the emergency, probably will have places in the industry during the peaceful days of the future."

Many of the office jobs now will lead to positions of hostesses on passenger ships, he pointed out, cruise guides, tour promoters and travel agents after the war.

U.M.W. Duns C.I.O. on Big Debt

By Carson F. Lyman
Associated Press Staff Writer

John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers Union, which put up much of the money for the C. I. O.'s early organization campaigns, has sent a dun letter to the C. I. O. asking for a token payment on an indebtedness of $1,665,000, it was learned yesterday.

An associate of Lewis said the letter proposed that part of the indebtedness be liquidated by deducting $60,000 in dues owed the C. I. O. by the miners' union for March and April. The U. M. W., he said, paid $30,000 monthly in dues to the C. I. O.

The letter was said to have been signed by Thomas Kennedy, U. M. W. secretary-treasurer, and addressed to J. R. Bell, C. I. O. comptroller and brother-in-law of Lewis. Lewis heads the mine union and was the C. I. O.'s first president. Bell and other C. I. O. officials declined to comment on the letter today or to say whether a reply had been sent.

Strained Relations

Washington has seen much evidence in recent weeks of strained relations between Lewis and Philip Murray, present head of the C. I. O. and incidentally vice president of the U. M. W. The two men, who fought side by side in the labor movement for years, split in the Presidential campaign of 1940 when Lewis supported Wendell Willkie, Republican nominee, and Murray supported President Roosevelt.

Recently Murray rejected a suggestion of Lewis that peace negotiations be resumed between the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L., reminding Lewis in effect that Murray and not Lewis was president of the C. I. O. and any peace move should emanate from Murray's office.

With this background in mind, labor leaders were speculating today on Lewis' reasons for asking for something "on account."

One man familiar with the letter said Lewis felt that the C. I. O. was in a financtial position to pay off the debt in installments, since many of its large unions had "substantial treasuries." He added that nothing had been paid on the indebtedness since 18 months ago, which was about the time Murray succeeded Lewis as president of the C. I. O.

Scoffs at Bolt Rumor

This informant scoffed at reports current in Washington for some time that Lewis was planning to withdraw the miners' union and affiliated organizations from the C. I. O.

"You don't do that to an organization which owes you $1,665,000," he said.

Lewis has been expanding his field of organization, recently taking under his jurisdiction several thousand dairy farmers from Michigan and New York.

Langer Vote Is Unlikely Till Next Week

Senate Majority Leader Barkley of Kentucky, last night abandoned hope that the Senate will be ready to vote on the question of denying a seat to Senator Langer (Republican), of North Dakota, before Monday or Tuesday of next week.

Barkley said there was "no chance" for a decision in the Langer case tomorrow, as he had expected, because of the number of Senators who want to speak both for and against the former North Dakota Governor whom a 13-to-3 vote of the Elections Committee has branded as unfit for the Senate by reason of "moral turpitude."

As the Langer case was dragging through its second week of Senate debate and heading for its third, Barkley acknowledged that most Senators appeared to have made up their minds on how they are going to vote.

Close Vote Is Forecast

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the subcommittee that investigated "moral turpitude" charges against Langer, told reporters he would not be surprised to see a close vote on the North Dakotans right to a seat in the chamber.

Senator Murdock (Democrat), of Utah, one of three Election Committee members who opposed the unseating of Langer, declared, however, that "voluntary statements" made to him by Senators indicate that "there is no question but what a majority are against removing the Senator from North Dakota."

In support of the contention of Langer supporters that Langer may be denied his seat on a two-thirds vote, rather than on a majority vote as proposed by the committee, Senator Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut, yesterday told the Senate that the two-thirds rule was adopted by the framers of the Constitution as an additional protection for the smaller States.

Cites First Law Text

In arguing the point, Danaher referred to "one of the treasures" of his own law library, a book by Zephaniah Swift who served in Congress from 1795 to 1797. It was the first law text written and published in the United States, Danaher said, and its list of subscribers was headed by George Washington.

Murdock, who will conclude his argument in the case today, charged on the floor yesterday that some of the preliminary charges against Langer, which he said were false, demonstrated:

"How far the enemies of Langer have gone to unseat the Senator when they couldn't do it at the polls."

Sole Eyewitness Dead, Slaying Suspect Freed

New York, March 18 (AP).—Eugenie Sanchez, 51, sought by Baltimore police since January 3, 1937, for the slaying of Julia Vallejo, was released in Felony Court today because the only eyewitness is dead.

Chief Inspector Stephen G. Nelson of the Baltimore police telegraphed New York police that he was "compelled to ask the release of Eugenie Sanchez because the only eyewitness to the slaying was killed at sea when his ship was torpedoed."

Pat Di Cicco Accused of Hitting Hotel Clerk

By the Associated Press

New York, March 18.—Magistrate William Klapp in Yorkville court today issued a summons for Pat Di Cicco, husband of the former Gloria Vanderbilt, charging simple assault.

The summons, returnable at 10 a. m. tomorrow, was requested by Peter Joyce, room clerk at the Hotel Drake, where the DI Ciccos are living.

Joyce said in court that as a result of a dispute over the telephone with Di Cicco, the heiress' six-foot husband had punched him several times and knocked him over a typewriter desk. Other guests in the hotel lobby halted the encounter, Joyce said.

Joyce's lawyer, Bernard Sandler, said the dispute started when Di Cicco telephoned the hotel desk and asked to borrow a kitchen pot to prepare "some spaghetti for a St. Patrick's Day celebration."

Di Cicco told a reporter that his wife had called the desk and requested some service.

"This fellow got very rude to Gloria," Di Cicco said. "I then went to the desk and told him not to get fresh. No blows were struck at any time. I simply told the man that if he continued his rudeness we would leave the hotel. The manager and assistant manager then bawled him out."

Mrs. Di Cicco commented that there had been "a quarrel, but it wasn't much of a one. Anyway, the manager tells me he's had the clerk discharged."

It all began while she and her husband were visiting Mr. and Mrs. Dan Topping (Sonja Henie) who live nearby Mrs. Di Cicco said.

"We had some chicken, ready to cook, and we asked the manager of the Drake to send over a pot to cook in," she said. "He told us he would. The pot didn't arrive. We called up the clerk and he got very fresh. Pat was very nice, but the clerk insulted him, so Pat went over."

British Regret Bombing of Turks

London, March 18 (AP).—The British foreign office reported tonight it had expressed regret to the Turkish government for accidental bombing of the Turkish town of Milas last Sunday by the R. A. F.

Some pilots participating in a night raid on the Italian Island of Rhodes got off course and bombed Milas in error, the foreign office said. Turkish accounts said two persons were killed and one wounded by 15 bombs dropped on the town from three planes.

NOTES ON LOSING BATTLES

Somewhere in the dim, grim—and not necessarily too distant future—a vital piece of military machinery is going to break down at a critical moment in combat for the lack of the rubber which this woman is wasting.

We will say it was only thoughtlessness. But in these times we have to THINK. This means all of us. This means YOU. So don't do anything that will waste rubber.

For example, don't hasten the ruin of our truck tires by telling the laundry man to call, and then leaving the house before he arrives, thus necessitating a second trip.

Please, when you call the laundry, WAIT for the laundry man, have your entire bundle READY, and DON'T ask for special delivery service. In this small, but vitally important way, you will be saving rubber, and make a definite contribution to the defense of America.

Don't Waste Rubber!

BUY DEFENSE ECONOMY HEALTH BONDS TODAY!

YOU can help by placing your call for pick-up service at least one day in advance.

being READY with your bundle when the route man calls.
paying when the laundry is delivered (so the route man won't have to make a collection call the next day).
sending ALL the wash in one bundle once a week, instead of sending several small bundles on different days.

WE are now helping by enforcing a daily mileage maximum on every truck.

using speed regulators and governors on all our trucks so that tires cannot be worn out prematurely by fast driving.
re-arranging routes for maximum efficiency and minimum length.

Be Serious About Fitness Drive, U.S.Told

America was warned yesterday by John B. Kelly's much-criticized physical fitness division—the "boondoggling hot potato" which was transferred last week from the Office of Civilian Defense to the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Service—that it either must "take the Federal fitness program seriously or suffer the consequences."

In a release out of Philadelphia, on Office of Civilian Defense stationery, the warning declared this war will be won by approximately five million youngsters between the ages of 14 and 20 now in high school.

"We must make sure they are supplied with the physical as well as material equipment necessary to score their victory," the division quoted Dr. Jay B. Nash, president-elect of the American Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation, as saying.

The physical fitness division with its coordinators of many sports will be turned over to ODHWS formally on April 1, but whether its activities will be scaled downward has not been announced. Although under the OCD, the division has operated largely as a separate agency to spread its "Hale America" philosophy.

Another OCD release yesterday, this from national headquarters here, announced that committees will be established throughout the country soon "to assist local authorities in identifying Army and Navy plants for special protection."

Director James M. Landis said War and Navy Departments and the OCD had agreed that inspection in air-raid protection matters in privately-owned plants having important war contracts rests with the military services rather than local warden setups.

"For security reasons," he said, "the Army and Navy do not feel it is desirable to send lists of such plants to municipalities. A statement by the plant management that it is engaged on Army and Navy contracts should serve to identify it."

The plant should not then be forced to participate in local air-raid protection exercises, such as blackouts, it was said.

Navy Relief's Tasks Heavier

A good way to remember Pearl Harbor, and the wives and families of the men who died there on December 7, is to take out your wallet or checkbook and make a sizable contribution to the current drive of the Navy Relief Society, the Washington Chapter of that organization said yesterday.

"Many people do not realize that the Navy actually lost more men killed in action December 7 than in the Spanish American and first World War combined," the chapter pointed out.

"In normal times the society gets along on a budget of about $200,000 a year, but the disaster at Pearl Harbor imposed a burden too great for our resources."

Five Million Goal

Currently, through a citizens' committee headed nationally by Clarence Dillon, of New York, the society is attempting to raise five million dollars by March 31 to assist the families of Navy men. Of the campaign goal, Washington has been assigned a quota of $75,000.

Some of the money expended by the society is in the form of outright gifts to the families of men killed in action; other portions are advanced in the form of loans to needy families of men at sea.

Prior to Pearl Harbor, the society said yesterday, the greatest part of its outlays was in loans, 99 per cent of which were repaid.

Recently a mother whose son had been killed at Pearl Harbor, acknowledged a cash gift from the society and wrote:

Mother Is Brave

"Dying for one's country is a glorious death, but to me, a mother, he seemed such a good boy and so young, and his death made our home very sad. However, I am being brave, as he would want me to be . . ."

It is to help people such as this mother that the society, operating on a minimum overhead cost, now asks the support of the public in its campaign for funds, it was stated yesterday.

Typical of the work done locally under Navy Relief Society auspices is that of the Fleet Reserve Auxiliary, Unit No. 4, made up of Navy wives and mothers who meet at the home of members and make clothing for the families of Navy men in the lower pay brackets.

In charge of the work here is Mrs. Stanley Fuller, 24 Burns Street Northeast, who said yesterday that her group makes numerous layettes, which are donated outright to Navy families, as well as boys' and girls' clothing, much of which already has been given to Navy families returning to the United States from Pacific outposts.

Individual solicitation is planned by the campaign leaders, but persons not so reached are invited to mail their contributions to Chairman George A. Garrett, 1721 I Street Northwest.

Arlington Youth Hurt in Action Returns to Fight

Sergt. William S. Fought is in the fight again.

The 20-year-old Arlington County youth, who was wounded seriously December 9 while fighting with the Army Air Corps in the Philippines, has recovered and is again on active duty, according to word received from the War Department by his father, Joseph A. C. Fought, 5510 Lee Highway.

FOUGHT

Sergt. Fought, a graduate of Washington-Lee High School, was one of 75 Army fliers who were awarded Distinguished Flying Crosses for a spectacular mass flight of four-engined bombers from Hawaii to the Philippines last September.

He was accompanied by Arthur S. V. Smith, secretary of the department of supply, and William Sydney Robinson, adviser to the Australian government on supplies of raw materials and munitions.

Mrs. Evatt, his American-born wife, was with him. She was born in Ottumwa, Iowa.

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 18.—Antoine Gazda, 47-year-old inventor and munitions salesman, who was arrested December 9 as an enemy alien, has been released in the custody of the War Department because his inventions are considered essential by the Army to the war effort, it was learned today.

Gazda, who is an Austrian, passed two months in detention at Ellis Island after he was taken into custody by agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation at his suite at the Waldorf-Astoria. He received a hearing before one of the citizen hearing boards set up here and was paroled in the Army's custody by specific request.

Blood Bank Aid Increases

Participation of more American Legion groups in the Children's Hospital blood-bank campaign was announced yesterday. The District of Columbia department of the legion is a cosponsor of the drive, with the Washington Bridge League and The Post.

The fourth of a series of benefit parties given by members of George Washington Post No. 1 will be held tomorrow night at the home of Harry W. Brown, vice commander, 215 Fourteenth Street Southeast.

Mrs. Anna V. Gramberg, president of Vincent B. Costello Auxiliary Unit, announced that the third annual blood bank benefit party will be held at the home of Mrs. Sadie Dearing, 2431 Newton Street Northeast, on April 16.

Mrs. Lee M. Goetting, president of Victory Auxiliary Unit, No. 4, said activities for the fund will continue until the visitation scheduled for April 10 at the Legion Club. Mrs. Chester J. Bradley, the unit's child welfare chairman, reported $10 was raised at a benefit given last Saturday at her residence.

Quentin Roosevelt Post, No. 11, yesterday reported a donation of $15 has been voted. Lincoln Post and its auxiliary unit revealed that $11.50 was raised at its Lincoln's Birthday dinner. Washington Police and Fire Post, No. 29, announced a contribution of $25 and its auxiliary unit voted a $20 donation, with an additional amount to come later.

Receipts at The Post yesterday included $27 from Victory Post and $5 from the Hine Parent-Teacher Association. A complete list of donors to the fourth annual Children's Hospital blood bank campaign will be published at the close of the drive.

Maj. G. R. Mountfort's "blood bottle" brimmed over yesterday.

Maj. Mountfort, a professorial, precise officer at the ordnance branch of the British army staff here, had been hunting around for some way the members of his branch could show their appreciation for American hospitality.

He decided blood gifts to the American Red Cross might be an excellent way. Blood for America.

Having a flair for the graphic, the major rigged up a chart with a large white bottle sketched on it and pinned it in the hallway of ordnance headquarters at 1901 K Street Northwest for all members of the branch to see every day.

The idea was that each time some one gave a pint, part of the bottle would be filled in with red ink and that every one would be interested in seeing the bottle thus filled up.

February 12 he started the plan. To push the idea along Maj. Mountfort did a wee bit of propagandizing on the side, such as going around and whispering into people's ears, "What! Haven't you given your little drop to America yet?"

The campaign whistled along. The bottle got redder and redder. Stenographers, messengers, officers, guards shed their pint.

Yesterday Maj. Mountfort brought seven persons down to the Army and Navy Red Cross blood-donor center at Twenty-third and Constitution Avenue Northwest and let doctors pry out nearly a gallon of blood from them. That filled the bottle, a 41-pint affair.

Included in the seven was the head of the ordnance branch himself, Col. G. G. (Digger) Reynolds, a British officer but a citizen of Australia, where he now has parents, brothers and other relatives waiting to give the Japanese what they're asking for.

Along, too, to give her pint came the colonel's blue-eyed secretary, a Philadelphia girl, Phyllis Darbyshire, who is blessed with a smile that enchants.

Miss Darbyshire was a bit worried about taking the colonel's picture with his coat off, thinking this might be "undignified." But since it is necessary to get to the arm in order to withdraw blood, this was thought better than cutting off the sleeve of the colonel's coat.

It was Col. Reynolds' first blood "transfusion." He cracked jokes while the "medico," as Maj. Mountfort called him, took his blood pressure (while the colonel's muscle flexed) and applied soap, alcohol and acetone, iodine, a needle filled with procaine hydrochloride and then started digging out the pint.

Today Maj. Mountfort puts up a brand new, bottle, all white but due to get redder and redder.

Merit Agency Spreads Out

To reduce widespread confusion among hundreds of visitors and job applicants jamming the Civil Service Commission daily, that agency has prepared a directory pointing out it now has space in three buildings.

They are the main building at Seventh and F Streets Northwest, the old Land Office Building at Seventh and E Streets Northwest, and the Mather Building at 916 G Street Northwest.

Types of visitors who should go there, are: Those seeking transfers to agencies with war priority or in connection with the current decentralization of the Government, room 110, Land Office Building.

Those qualified for higher administrative or technical jobs drawing $4600 or more yearly should go to the special interview unit, room 102, Land Office Building.

Persons with scientific, technical and professional experience, including engineering of all types, should register in the Mather Building if they wish to be put on the national register as willing to aid national defense.

The present level of 75,000 visitors and phone calls to the commission each week is a sharp increase over work of other years. The new war transfer unit alone is interviewing approximately 600 persons daily.

Officials said yesterday that while the commission's job-getting activities are generally well known—as proved by calls—there still were persons who did not know of the new units set up to meet war demands, nor of the national roster. The roster is a "talent pool" of almost a half-million names which the commission has spent almost two years collecting.

Community Chest Unable to Use Funds for Blackout

The budget committee of the Community Chest has decided that it is impossible to allocate $10,000 or $15,000 for blackout and air-raid protection equipment to its many agencies, it was announced yesterday.

As a result, conferences will be held with each agency to work out the best possible arrangements for safety and convenience at a minimum cost.

Chest agencies include nine children's institutions, eight settlements, three boys' club branches, three homes for the aged and five Salvation Army centers. Provisions of equipment for all of them would be too great a strain on the Chest's finances, it was said.

The agencies will be asked to concentrate evening activities as far as possible in rooms which already have adequate shades, or which can be easily blacked out, and a survey will be made to determine the absolutely necessary equipment for protection against fire or bombs.

Mr. Loew Talks At Southeast Lenten Service

The world today is looking for Christians who can translate Jesus' principles of love into terms of conduct, declared the Rev. Ralph W. Loew yesterday at the Penn Theater, 650 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast.

Mr. Loew, associate pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, addressed daily Lenten services of Southeast churches. The Rev. Horace Lukens, pastor of Vienna (Va.) Presbyterian Church, will preach today at 12 o'clock.

"The whole purpose of the Lenten observance," said the minister, "is to impress us anew with the need of having a really personal Christian experience. If He is to be our Lord at all, He must be Lord in our emotions, our thoughts and all we ever hope to be."

Dr. Marshall Speaks

The significance of Christ's hands was emphasized by the Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall in his address at the weekly Federation of Churches' Lenten service at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G Street Northwest. He is pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

"Christ has been under the microscope of 20 centuries," stated Dr. Marshall, assuring that no one has ever been able to find a flaw in his character in all that time.

"His hands," he said, "are like open mouths to tell you of God's word." He was presented by the Rev. Dr. Carroll C. Roberts, pastor of Ninth Street Christian Church, who presided in the absence of the Rev. Dr. Frederick Brown Harris, chairman of the Federation of Churches' public meetings committee.

Dr. Sizoo Heard

The Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of St. Nicholas' Collegiate Church, New York City, continued his Lenten addresses at Epiphany Church. He will speak there again today and tomorrow at 12 o'clock, and also today at 8 p. m. at Foundry Methodist Church, Sixteenth and P Streets Northwest.

Among other Lenten services for today are the following:

Newspaper Officials Talk Before Ad Club

Problems imposed on advertisers by the war were described to the Washington Advertising Club yesterday by Crosby Boyd, assistant advertising director of the Evening Star, and Donald M. Bernard, advertising director of The Post.

Boyd stressed the need of more judicious use of engraving to effect savings of zinc and tin. Bernard outlined copy limitations which the war has brought about.

Prowler Molests Two Women

One woman was molested and another was assaulted by a stocky Negro prowler in the Southeast section early yesterday, according to the police.

The man first accosted a hospital nurse about 2 p. m. as she reached her door on Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast. When she answered him sharply the man ran away.

A few minutes later a man of the same description walked up to the porch of a house on G Street Southeast where a housewife was waiting for her husband, due home from work at the Navy Yard. She said he grabbed her throat and threw her down, but she managed to scream and the man fled.

The victims said the man was 18 or 19 years old, weighed about 135 pounds and was 5 feet 4 inches tall.

Soldier Indicted as Murderer of District Taxicab Driver

A charge of murder in the first degree was lodged by the District grand jury yesterday against Johnny Rathbun, 20-year-old Army private who allegedly ran amok with a service automatic on February 23 and shot to death a local taxi driver.

Rathbun was accused of having attempted to hold up Conrad L. Steele, 36, of 411½ Fifth Street Northeast, while riding in Steele's cab. When Steele attempted to flee, jumping from his taxi at Eleventh and East Capitol Streets, police charge that Rathbun shot and killed him.

Police state that motorists at the scene told them that Rathbun then commandeered a private car, later deserting this for a second taxi in which he returned to his station at Bolling Field.

Police claim Rathbun confessed the shooting. They quoted him as saying he was drunk at the time, and had left camp with a gun taken from a fellow soldier and a vague intention of "getting even" with a Georgia chain-gang superintendent who had maltreated him once.

Also among the 29 indictments handed up by the grand jurors was one charging Frank P. Gairens, 26, with absconding with payroll funds entrusted to him as a subcontractor's timekeeper on the Statler Hotel construction job.

Gairens was accused of having taken pay envelopes containing $866.26 from the bookkeeper of Mehring & Hanson, sheet-metal contractors, on January 30. He was alleged to have run off with them to Baltimore instead of turning them over to the workers.

He was arrested in Newark, N. J., whence he fled, police claim, after a spending orgy in Baltimore had exhausted his funds.

The charges against those indicted were:

First degree murder—Johnny Rathbun, 20, for the death of Conrad L. Steele, 36, from pistol wounds received at Eleventh and East Capitol Streets, February 23, 1942.

Grand larceny—William H. Hickman, 33; George F. Merryman, 23.

Housebreaking and larceny—Ray H. Catlett, 19, Negro, four indictments; James T. Clough, 18, Negro, two indictments; Harold R. C. Wallace, 19, Negro, two indictments; James M. Lanier, 23, Negro, two indictments; George B. Brooks, 19, Negro; Arthur L. Duncan, 19, Negro; Mose Benjamin, 37, Negro; Frank O. Thomas, 41, Negro; Winfield S. Wright, 24, Negro; Lemine L. Knotts, 30, Negro; Lee Watson, Jr., 18, Negro, three indictments; James C. Hazinbotham, 26, Negro, two indictments; Frank Parker, 25, Negro, two indictments.

Embezzlement and larceny after trust—Frank P. Gairens, 26.

Assault on police officer—James W. Neal, 36, Negro.

Theft of mail—Ruth Marcus, 23.

Receiving stolen property—Herbert Seabold, 21.

Numbers law violations—Louis J. DeMarco, 49; Thomas McFarlane, 48.

Narcotics law violations—Charles Corney, 32, Negro.

Unauthorized use of auto—James C. Hazinbotham, 26, Negro; Edward Davis, 28, Negro; Ernest Dozier, 19, Negro.

The grand jurors dismissed the following charges:

Assault with dangerous weapon—Daniel Handon, 44, Negro; David J. Wilson, 42, Negro; Arthur J. Boler, 46, Negro; William B. Redmond, 33, Negro; Mitchell White, 34.

Housebreaking and larceny—James W. Loften, 52, Negro; Thomas W. Mack, 32, Negro.

Housebreaking and assault with intent to kill—John B. Robinson, 24, Negro.

Numbers law violations—Orlando Alston, 23, Negro.

Unauthorized use of auto—Winfield S. Wright, 24, Negro.

Mrs. Patterson Sues Winchell

Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Times-Herald, yesterday filed in District Court a $400,000 defamation suit against Walter Winchell, the Andrew Jergens Co., his radio sponsors, and the National Broadcasting Company.

The suit came as a result of Winchell's Sunday night broadcast of March 15 over the N. B. C. network, in which, it is charged, the Broadway chronicler falsely implied that Mrs. Patterson was associated with the late Senator Lundeen and Nazi Agent George Sylvester Viereck in unpatriotic activities.

"Compensatory damages" of $100,000 were asked of each of the defendants, and an extra $100,000 was demanded of Winchell in "punitive damages."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

MacLeish Becomes A Marked Man

Archibald MacLeish, the librarian and advisor to the great, is going to be kicked out of the bureaucrats club whose list of members in this city is far too long.

His conduct before the House Appropriations Committee simply can't be tolerated by the power-grabbers and bureaucrats. He violated all the sacred rules and regulations when he (1) asked the committee to give him only $19,098 additional for the 1943 fiscal year instead of the $302,220 the Budget Bureau had proposed, (2) that he be given funds to hire only 31 new employes instead of 166 as had been approved by the President, (3) he admitted voluntarily that his agency, the Library of Congress, wasn't a defense agency and (4) that he had been looking for a "good occasion" to lengthen the hours of his employes because "the work is considerably beyond a 39-hour week." All of which makes MacLeish a marked man among the bureaucrats.

Office of Price Administration appears to be winning the fight against moving out to isolated Suitland, Md. The new Federal building there will be ready in a month . . . it has been assigned to OPA, but OPA officials say they would rather move out of the city altogether than to nearby Suitland. The real problems are inadequate transportation and housing. And if you don't think transportation is a problem, ask the Navy employes who work in the Arlington Building. They spend hours a day going and coming to work. Public Buildings admit they are giving consideration to the OPA plea.

That bill which would place most of the postal service on a 48-hour week is being acted on swiftly by Congress. The House has approved the bill unanimously. The Senate Post Office and Post Roads Committee has okayed the measure and Chairman McKellar tried to bring it up on the floor yesterday. The Senator failed but he'll try again today. Postal employes would be paid straight time for the additional eight hours under the bill.

900 to Move

About 900 of Railroad Retirement's 1500 employes are expected to go to Chicago. The move will start at 5 p. m. on April 1. It will take at least a month to complete the move. The transfer appears to be permanent as the Government has purchased the 12-story American Fore Building in Chicago for $1,500,000 . . . Agriculture has been hard hit by the war. It has lost nearly 3000 employes to the armed forces, or about 18 per cent of the men in the department within draft age . . . Civil Service Commission sick leave has increased since its employes are limited to only one day at a time except in emergency cases . . . A Republican, Karl Stefan of Nebraska, heaps praise on the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce for converting its operations to a war footing.

Like children a few days before Christmas, Federal workers are now displaying more initiative and resourcefulness. To those who haven't heard, it's efficiency rating time. This year efficiency ratings must be as of March 31 and whether you'll get your salary raised or lowered will depend on your efficiency rating. If you haven't been on your good behavior recently, it's about time or it will soon be too late. In most departments the ratings will be made within the next 10 days.

You must be rated either "excellent" or "very good" to get an administration promotion under the Ramspeck-Mead Act. If you are rated "good," you can get a step raise if your salary is below the average of your grade, but not if your salary is average or higher. You must be given a step reduction if you are given a "fair" rating and those who are given "unsatisfactory" ratings must be fired or given a lower grade job. The efficiency ratings effect the big and little employes, from assistant secretaries to messengers. This is the first time the rating system has had "teeth" and has covered so many employes. Again we warn, be on your good behavior, or else.

Runaway Truck Crashes Into Living Room

Beck, of 4500 Beck Street, Bradbury Heights, Md., was seated in the living room of her home last night when a driverless truck, which had coasted down a slope, crashed into the house. Here Mrs. Beck and members of her family survey the damage; two porch pillars knocked down, a supporting brick pedestal pushed over and the front door damaged

District Judges Assigned for Spring Term

Assignments of District Court justices for the spring term were announced yesterday, following a general term session of the jurists. The new assignments take effect April 7.

Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher will continue to sit in the condemnation and civil nonjury branch of the court, also presided over by his predecessor, former Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat.

Justice Jesse C. Adkins is scheduled to move into motions court, while Justice Jennings Bailey will go from motions to a civil court division assigned to jury cases.

Justice James M. Proctor will continue as pretrial and assignment justice, and Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, James W. Morris, and F. Dickinson Letts have been reassigned to the criminal branches.

Justices David A. Pine and Bolithia Laws will share the civil jury courts with Justice Bailey, while civil nonjury actions will be handled by Justices Matthew F. McGuire and Daniel W. O'Donoghue. The third nonjury branch has been left vacant, since Justice Oscar R. Luhring is currently absent from the bench because of illness.

Yale Glee Club Gives Skillful Performance

Through the channels of beautifully presented music, 50 American College boys last night conveyed a message of fraternal understanding of the Good Neighbor policy, in a concert of Songs of the Americas at the Pan American Union.

The Yale University Glee Club, in a skillfully blended program of Brazilian, Argentine and North American folk songs, seasoned wth moving Negro spirituals, sang for an audience of more than 750 persons, including diplomatic representatives, high Government officials and ranking officers of the United States armed forces.

The Glee Club, directed by Marshall Bartholomew, last summer assisted the development of closer inter-American relations, traveling more than 13,000 miles giving concerts in principal cities of every South American country. Throughout their tour the Glee Club enjoyed singular success and has been recognized as one of the most popular musical units to tour South America from the United States.

The 54 undergraduate students who compose the Glee Club are presently on a spring vacation tour of Eastern United States.

Washington Elks Elect Durkin Exalted Ruler

Detective Sergt Ambrose A. Durkin, Criminal Records Bureau, Washington Metropolitan Police Department, last night was elected exalted ruler of Washington Lodge, B. P. O. Elks. He succeeds Allen J. Duvall, whose term expires April 1.

Durkin, esteemed leading knight of the order, has been active in the organization for many years. Music has been his hobby and for 25 years he has been a bass soloist in the choir of the Church of the Epiphany on G Street, and a member of the Washington Company, Georgetown Glee Club, Imperial Male Quartet, Motet Choral Society and Invisible Choir.

Durkin attended Holy Trinity School, Georgetown University and National Law School, holding a L. L. B. degree from the latter school.

Other chair officers elected were Leonard L. Pierce, leading knight; Charles R. Bush, loyal knight; W. Seymour Hall, lecturing knight. William S. Shelby, who has served as secretary of Washington Lodge for 29 years, was returned to office when he defeated Claude S. Martin in a contest which produced the largest ballot in many years. William P. Engel was elected treasurer and Daniel A. Cleary, tiler.

Pickup Service Restudied

P.U.C. to Propose Revised Cab Zones, Rates Within 10 Days

Completely revised taxi zones and rates will be announced for public consideration within the next week or ten days, Public Utilities Commission Chairman Gregory Hankin announced last night.

With the publication of a new zone map, notice will be given of the continuance of the November 14 hearing on the cab rates and zones, which was suspended until a more thorough study of the taxicab situation could be made.

Tentative details of the new zones and charges were submitted yesterday to John Royer, jr., president of the D. C. Taxi Owners Association and of the Premier Cab Association, and Edmund Barwell, president of the Yellow Cab Co. Hankin reported that both were "very enthusiastic" about the plans.

Hankin also conferred with Royer and Barwell on the Commission's opinion on the pick-up cab service, which was filed yesterday. The main point of discussion was the Commission's order that participation in the pick-up service was not optional with drivers belonging to associations or companies which had petitioned to join the service. Such participation, Hankin asserted, was mandatory.

As the first move toward a more stringent enforcement of the pick-up regulations, Hankin recommended to the commission that the driver and or operator of a cab which overcharged persons under the pick-up service be referred to the corporation counsel for prosecution.

The driver, whose association does not participate in the pickup service, admitted to hauling three passengers and charging them full fare each, but said he was acting upon advice given in a radio address by Edwin Glenn, president of the cab drivers' union. Under the law, said Hawkins, the driver is liable for a $200 fine.

Not only will overcharging drivers be given stern corrective treatment by the commission, according to its opinion on the pickup service, but some means will be found to prevent drivers from keeping their cabs off the street during rush hours rather than engage in the pickup service.

A Crowded Agenda

Planning Body to Tackle Male Dormitory Proposal Today

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission this morning will open a two-day monthly meeting to tackle such controversial proposals as erection of war workers' dormitories in the Mall and conversion of a large chunk of Anacostia Park into a Navy Yard annex.

President Roosevelt recently recommended construction of dormitories in the open Mall area, between the Washington Monument and the Capitol. The commission, led by Chairman Frederic A. Delano, uncle of the President, has consistently opposed structural utilization of the mile-and-a-half-long tract.

John Nolen, jr., director of planning, said Rear Admiral George Pettengill, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, will personally appear before the commission tomorrow to justify conversion of a section of Anacostia Park—directly across the river from the yard—to wartime uses.

Also on the agenda for the two-day meeting are:

Discussion of sites for two elementary schools, one in the far Northeast section and one in the Northwest, and a new police station in the Northeast.

Consideration of advanced plans, prepared by the Army Engineer's Office, for four demountable bridges—three across the Potomac and one across the Anacostia—as a precaution against destruction or damaging of permanent spans.

Presentation of a report by Max S. Wehrly, city planner, on additional sites and land-use plans in the Alley Dwelling Authority's emergency housing program which contemplates 4500 low-rent dwelling units.

Discussion of the plight of the new Federal office building nearing completion at Suitland, Md., which will have no housing facilities for any of its employes. A year ago the planning agency recommended that dwellings be built on the 425-acre tract in conjunction with the office building.

Presentation of a report by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, on problems incidental to extension of Indpendence Avenue westward to the river. One of these is how to do the job without razing the old red brick building occupied by the Treasury Register's Office.

Outlays Increased

D. C. Doubled Debt in '40, Bureau of Census Reports

"Outstanding changes in revenue sources, a two-fold increase in capital outlays, and doubled debt characterized the 1940 fiscal picture of the National Capital," the Bureau of Census reported yesterday in releasing financial statistics for 1940 on American cities.

The bureau reported "eventful changes" that year in the District's fiscal policy, among them the abolition of the intangible personal property tax and the imposition of an income tax, moves which tended to offset each other since there was little change in total tax collections.

"Nontax revenue, however, rose 21 per cent as the result of a $2,500,000 jump in Federal grants. Over half of the amount classified as grants represents the Federal Government's share of local government expense; in 1940 this share—six million dollars—was increased a million dollars. . . . PWA grants were also enlarged by a similar amount."

The bureau's report notes that Washington's gross debt in 1940 "was far below the average per capita for cities over 100,000 population, owing to stringent debt limitations," and adds that the per capita amount of Federal grants to Washington "was about the same as the average for Federal and State aid to other cities."

The District's expenditures for charities, the bureau said, were less than half the average per capita for cities in the same size group.

"On the other hand, costs of health, hospitals and sanitation on a per capita basis not only exceeded the average for all cities over 100,000 population but also surpassed the all-State average of 1939."

The bureau's report lists, in easily understandable form, the costs of maintaining the various departments of the District government, and offers comparisons of costs and revenues here with the average for cities over 100,000 population.

Librarians to Meet At Catholic U. Tonight

The Rev. Francis A. Mullin, of Catholic University's department of library science, and members of his staff are scheduled to address the District Library Association when it meets in McMahon Hall Auditorium at the university tonight at 8:15 o'clock.

Following the talks, devoted to the department of library science, members of the association will inspect exhibits in the University library.

D. C. Slums A Racket, Citizen Says

Property Rented At Exorbitant Rates, Southwest Leader Tells Committee

John C. Rhines, representing the Southwest Civic Association, went up to Capitol Hill yesterday and told a House committee that "the biggest racketeers in the world" are promoting slum conditions in Southwest Washington.

To members of the House Public Buildings and Grounds Committee, obviously impressed by his sincerity, Rhines declared, "These racketeers go down there in the Southwest, buy up property and rent at exorbitant rates."

In many sections rooms are rented at from $2.50 to $3.75 a week, he said, adding that no lights or running water are provided and that all toilet facilities are out-of-doors.

He said that citizens of the community have sought relief from the conditions by protesting to the Health Department, although no relief has yet been offered.

Investigation Ordered

(A House District subcommittee has been directed to start an investigation of health problems in the Southwest section.)

"Another bugaboo," Rhines said, is:

"When we bring up the various problems we have down there, we're told, 'Don't raise so much noise. The Southern Senators don't want you to ask for so much.' That's not true, I think.

"Southern Senators and every man wants the Negro to have a place to bathe and enough food because they know that makes him a better citizen. And right now we've all got to be good citizens. We've got a war to win, and we've all got to help in winning it."

He pleaded that the area of nine square blocks which has been proposed as a location for a housing development for Federal warworkers not be taken away from the Negroes.

Committee members assured him it will not be. The plan, sponsored by Arthur Goodwillie of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, calls for an expenditure of 5 million dollars in the Senate-approved 70-million-dollar District area war housing bill being considered by the committee.

Ihlder Testifies

John Ihlder, executive officer of the Alley Dwelling Authority, told the committee his agency "is doing everything possible to the extent means are provided in obtaining rehousing for Negroes."

The ADA already has provided 1196 dwellings for Negroes in the District and 1393 more are under construction, he said. Only 613 homes have been provided for whites under the agency's program, he added.

Ihlder will continue his testimony when the group resumes its hearings at 10 a. m. today.

Arthur F. Binns, of Philadelphia, chairman of the housing committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, expressed approval of President Roosevelt's Mall temporary dormitory plan and urged that temporary housing be substituted for the 10,000 permanent homes recommended by the Senate in its version of the bill.

Chairman Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, defined the committee's policy of recouping as much as possible from war housing programs for the Federal treasury.

G. W. Penton, a consulting engineer, also urged the committee to recommend housing in the local program.

Citizens Indorse Plan

Following a speech by its president, Harry Wender, describing the advantages which will accrue to Washington, the Southwest Citizens Association adopted a resolution indorsing the slums rehabilitation program covered by the Goodwillie plan.

The plan provides for the erection of a "garden city" in an area of about nine city blocks now considered as slum area. The association decided also to request the Washington Recreation Department to assign a specially trained playground director to replace Louis Mitchell, recently transferred to recreation headquarters. More than 75 members attended the meeting which was held in the Southwest Branch of the Public Library, Seventh and H Streets Southwest.

Comdr. Born Unhurt In Plane Crash

Lieut. Comdr. A. S. Born and a crew of three enlisted men escaped uninjured yesterday morning when their observation plane crashed in the Washington channel between the Naval Air Station and the Corinthian Yacht Club.

The plane, which was coming in to land at the air station when the mishap occurred, sank after a launch from the station had removed the crew. The plane was later hoisted to the surface and towed to the air station for repairs.

G. U. Mask and Bauble Club Voted Winner Of 16th Annual One-Act Play Tournament

The Mask and Bauble Club of Georgetown University, presenting Lady Gregory's politico-social comedy-drama, "The Rising of the Moon," last night was unanimously voted winner of the sixteenth annual One-Act Play Tournament held under the auspices of the Community Center and Playgrounds Department of the District of Columbia, in Roosevelt High School Auditorium.

Second place, also by unanimous vote, went to the Federal Bureau of Investigation Recreation Association Theater Group, in "The Game of Chess," a tense psychological drama, by Kenneth Sawyer Goodman.

Other winners of the preliminary competitions, participating in last night's finals, were the Players Club of Central Community Center, in "Romance Is a Racket," by John Kirkpatrick, and the Falls Church Community Theater, in Ed Rowan's "On a Darkling Plain," in which the author appeared in the principal male role.

The cast of the winning play was composed of James McSherry, John Pinto, Frank Linder and Howard Madigan, under the direction of Albert Austen. With its scene on a quay in Ireland and the time an evening during the Irish Insurrection, "The Rising of the Moon" consists of the colloquy between a sergeant of police and a political jailbreaker. It was particularly well played by the Messrs. Pinto and McSherry, in the respective roles, with Mr. Linder and Mr. Madigan according them effective support in the two minor assignments. The Irish brogue was especially well maintained throughout the play.

"The Game of Chess" likewise, was efficiently performed by a male cast of four, consisting of J. F. Buckley, Austin Helgerson, Jack Redmond and Donald Tackett, under the direction of Mr. Buckley.

The Goodman playlet, familiar from previous presentations in earlier tournaments, is a war of wits between a Russian aristocrat and a peasant, well written, interesting and rich in the element of suspense.

The 1942 One-Act Play Tournament was under the executive chairmanship of Edmund J. Evans, with Mrs. Maude Howell Smith, chairman of the committee on judges. The judges of last night's finals were the dramatic editors of the local press—Jay Carmody, of the Star; Maxine Cook, of the Daily News; Bernie Harrison, of the Times-Herald, and Nelson B. Bell, of The Washington Post.

Cash awards to the finalists in the sum of $75 were donated to the tournament committee by the Washington Star, The Washington Post and the Times-Herald.

Pursuant to usual custom, the successful culmination of the sixteenth renewal of the District One-Act Play Tournament, will be celebrated by the annual dinner and frolic, in Barker Hall, Y. W. C. A., on next Monday evening.

Postlude

'Light of God' Is Presented By Choir

By Ray C. B. Brown

Chancel Choir of Covenant-First Presbyterian Church presents "The Light of God" by Philip James on Wednesday night. Director: Theodore Schaefer. Soloists: Juanita Claxon, Henrietta Bagger Plum, William Hayghe and Jordan Bentley.

For the fifth musical Wednesday evening of the season, Theodore Schaefer, minister of music for Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, directed his chancel choir in the first local performance of Philip James' "The Light of God." This interesting American composition is but one of the novelties which Mr. Schaefer has brought to our attention and presented with a careful preparation which has bought out their merits. His choice on this occasion disclosed the mystic side of Philip James, who is best known to the public by orchestral music.

BROWN

Without adopting any of Cesar Franck's idiomatic ways, Mr. James writes religious music which reveals a strong affinity for the Belgian composer's spirituality. This affinity is difficult to describe in words and must be comprehended by intuition. The subject of "The Light of God" is one that would have appealed to Franck, and Mr. James has treated it with a harmonic subtlety that Franck would have approved.

Constance Russell and Lucien Laporte Kirsch give a recital of sonatas for piano and violoncello Wednesday night in the Sulgrave Club. Program: Sonata in E minor (Brahms), Sonata No. 2 (Martinu), Sonata in F major (Mozart-Casado), Sonata, Opus 6 (Barber).

Among the pleasurable memories which the talented young resident pianist, Constance Russell, will cherish is that of her experience last evening, when she had the honor to play with Lucien Laporte Kirsch, in the presence of the composer, the premiere performance of Bohuslax Martinu's second sonata.

Gaspar Cassado's transcription of Mozart's piano and violin sonata in F major, a charming version of a familiar classic, preceded Samuel Barger's sonata, Opus 6, which, to the best of my knowledge, has not been played here before. While there are moments of beauty in this work, it does not maintain the level of its best movement, the adagio, which is sincerely felt and powerfully projected.

Service Men To Get Use of Station Lounge

The commodious and elaborately furnished Presidential lounge at Union Station soon will be used as a recreation and reception center for enlisted men because of "informal suggestions" to Mrs. Roosevelt about a month ago. She was told that service men were forced to 'sprawl all over the station" while the lounge remained vacant, it was learned yesterday.

Following the "suggestions" from interested Government officials, the First Lady conferred with President Roosevelt, who expressed willingness to give the lounge, long used as a reception center for visiting foreign dignitaries.

Immediately, the Federal Security Agency got into touch with the State Department, which exercises control over the lounge, and asked permission to use the reception room for service men.

Although the FSA said yesterday it had received no word from the State Department, the latter agency said last night it had no objection to conversion of the lounge into a recreation center for the armed services.

Committee Set Up

The State Department said it had no plans for disposition of the elaborate furnishings in the lounge, but reported it had been suggested they be used to deck out quarters for the Inter-American Defense Board which will be set up in Washington following agreement on such an agency at the recent Rio de Janeiro conference.

Meantime, Hugo Wolter, executive director of recreation services for the District Defense Council, said a joint committee "for service to troops in transit at Union Station" had been set up under the chairmanship of Walter Clarkson, of the Travelers' Aid, to direct operation of the new recreation center.

Members of the committee, including representatives of the recreation services an dof the United Service Organizations, are Mrs. Wilson Compton, Mrs. Lionel Atwill, John Reily, Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, Mrs. Mason Gulick and Mrs. Morris Cafritz. Mrs. Gulick was in charge of the lounge during the first World War when it was used as a canteen for service men.

24-Hour Service

Mrs. Frances McFeeley, of the Travelers' Aid, assisted by corps of volunteer workers, will maintain 24-hour service in the lounge, Wolter revealed, but he was not able to state just when the center will begin operations.

The center will provide facilities for lounging, reading and writing, and quiet games, and in addition an information service covering the District's entertainment, religious, recreational and lodging facilities, will be offered.

Equipment for the center, Wolter said, will be provided with Federal Security Agency funds.

It is hoped eventually to restrict the center, he said, to men actually at Union Station for travel purposes, but at the outset, and until additional centers are set up, all service men will be welcomed.

Mrs. Mary Mellon Dies on Miami Yacht

Miami, Fla., March 18 (AP).—Mrs. Mary Taylor Mellon, 68, wife of William Larimer Mellon, Pittsburgh banker, died today after a week's illness on the family yacht, the Old River, off the Miami bayfront.

With her when death came were her husband, a nephew of Andrew W. Mellon, capitalist and former Secretary of the Treasurer, and two daughters, Mrs. John Walton, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock, of New York, wife of the polo player, now an Army major.

Test of Sirens, Total Blackout In Store for D. C. in 2 Weeks

Street, Traffic Lights Will Be Extinguished In Complete Trial

Within the next two weeks Washington can expect a daylight sounding of its air raid sirens, and also a short "total blackout" practice, according to the District Defense Council.

Thirty-eight electric sirens out of 41 ordered for the District have been installed and synchronized to the point where officials are willing to try them out. If they prove disappointing, as all other sirens have before them, then the blackout will be staged without them.

The blackout will include street and traffice lights, according to plans, and will be "announced in advance."

"We have no surprise blackout in mind, but of course we cannot say the city will have no surprise blackout. The Army interceptor command could call one at any time it was felt the danger warranted," Col. Lemuel Bolles, defense director, said.

George L. Strong, chief of the auxiliary rescue service of civilian defense, yesterday said volunteers for his squads are still urgently needed and announced appointment of the following service captains and officers:

J. Bryce Weaver, executive officer; Harry A. Kite, communications; Alice L. Fowler, night ambulances; S. Hardy Burgess, contact; Paul G. Schubert, personnel; Walter C. Lockhart, engineering and training; Harriet A. Long, day ambulances; Martin E. Jansson, special services branch; Leonard O. Hayes, service of supplies.

Lieutenants named included: Madalyn W. Miles, office; Audrey Warren, night executive officer; Sarah Lederer, day executive officer; Vernon E. House, motorcycle messenger, and Lawrence C. Juel.

Also, the following sergeants were announced: James Rice, Thomas Winchester, Frederick A. Murgia, Joseph E. King, William H. Burnette, Joseph H. Deckman, Norman Freedenberg, Joseph M. Gichner, James Lansburgh, Macon Inman, Edwin L. Donaldson, Louis R. Hyman, Donald A. Hay, William K. Swanson, Joseph Alfandre, Percy H. Skinner, John B. Rubino, Louis Ribnitzki, Ray Swearingen, Ruth Pearson, Elizabeth Cromley, Samuel Barmack, Nathan Leavitt, Roy W. Faulkwell, Fred R. Klotz, Alfred M. Laforest, J. Fred Chase, Maidie Nunn, and Thelma Jex.

Private Utility Guards Relieve 55 Policemen

Fifty-five Washington policemen yesterday were relieved of special duty guarding public utilities here since this country's entrance in the war and were assigned to their former posts in the precincts.

Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of police, who made the announcement, said the buildings will be policed from now on by private guards. Kelly said the move of replacing the members of his department was due to urgent need of augmenting the force.

The policemen have been guarding telephone exchanges, and other industrial plants and buildings since December 8.

Anacostia CDA Elects Benhoff

William Benhoff, jr., was elected deputy air raid warden of the Anacostia civilian defense area at a meeting last night in the Anacostia High School. He succeeds Harvey L. White.

Friendship Section Seeks $6000 Fund

In order to raise funds to support the civilian defense program the Friendship Citizens Associations last night started a house to house collection campaign which will continue until the association reaches its quota of $6000, Ruth Vanier, secretary of the association, announced last night.

"It is estimated that there are about 3000 homes in the Friendship area and campaign leaders hope that each home will contribute at least $2 so that the goal can be reached," Miss Vanier said. The association met at the Janney School, Wisconsin Avenue and Albemarle Street Northwest and more than 100 members attended.

Skip-a-Day Milk Delivery Proposed

Proposals to place home milk deliveries on a daylight, every-other-day basis are being studied by the Office of Defense Transportation as a means of conserving dairy vehicles and tires.

John L. Rogers, director of the motor transport division, said that the suggestions had resulted from investigations by his staff and that he had asked management and labor in the retail milk distribution field to cooperate with ODT in developing some general plan.

He said he had requested the cooperation of the International Association of Milk Dealers, Philip Murray, C. I. O. president, and Daniel J. Tobin, president of the A. F. L. Teamsters Union, in working out a milk delivery program.

Volunteer Aides 'Desperately' Needed

The Civilian Defense Volunteer Bureau at 501 Pennsylvania Avenue yesterday sounded a "desperate" call for women able to type and do clerical work. Housewives willing to give a few hours daily or each week were urged to register at once. Calls for help are reaching the bureau more frequently than it is able to respond, declared Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, chairman.

The money was delivered by Dr. C. Eder Reed, secretary-treasurer of the Navy Yard general collection committee.

Course for Nurses Begins March 30

As a means of releasing younger graduates for military service, courses for inactive nurses eligible for registration in the District of Columbia will begin March 30 at Sibley Hospital and April 15 at Doctors Hospital and Providence Hospital, it was announced yesterday by the Nursing Council on Defense.

Edith M. Beattie, secretary of the council, said that after taking refresher courses the inactive nurses became supervisers of Red Cross aides in hospitals, instructors in first aid, and filled other defense posts. She pointed out that approximately 80 women have graduated from the courses during the past few weeks or are now "in the process."

A registry of 5000 names of nurses is kept up to date in the council office and an intensive recruitment program is underway throughout the District. Miss Beattie said the response from school girls has been particularly good.

Rookie Conroy's Homer Snaps Cards' Streak

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★ Harris May Shift Estalella to Outfield

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 18.—Hold your hats, because here we go again, trying to tout you on a winner. We've got a good thing going on April 14. That's the day when they get away from the post in the American League pennant race, and this one can't miss.

POVICH

Our good thing is Bob Repass, the slickest-looking rookie ever to inhabit a Washington training camp. If he doesn't become a fixture at shortstop on the club, these eyes haven't been seeing right. There's a treat in store for Washington fans, and Repass will provide it.

Repass is in quite a spot, but that won't make much difference. All he's trying to do is take over the job vacated by Cecil Travis, the league's second-leading hitter last year and one of the league's better fielding shortstops. Repass will do all right, though. He won't hit with Travis, but how many guys will? If he hits within 50 points of Travis' .357 Repass will still be a considerable fellow with the bat.

Thus far Repass has done everything Travis could do in the field, and he has been doing it a whole lot more spectacularly. The fans will like that. Nary a game has passed, honest, without the fellow coming up with at least one super-duper play. To right or left, it hasn't made any difference. He has been coving more Florida real estate than the orange groves.

Repass Is Sporting Goods Salesman

The lad is a French Canadian, one generation removed, and in the off season he sells sporting goods in a Hartford, Conn., shop. He's a kind of handsome guy, with his 6 feet 1 inch, 180 pounds, nice face and smart apparel. He looks more handsome to Manager Bucky Harris because he's married and has a 3-A status in the draft.

Bucky Harris is still pinching himself to make sure this is no dream and that the Nats actually came up with such a guy as Repass in the draft. All he cost was the $7500 they paid over to the Columbus Club of the American Association last October. Harris had heard Repass was a fair sort of ball player. He wasn't expecting a dream shortstop.

Washington got him because the St. Louis Cardinals owned the Columbus Club and had no need for Repass, what with Martin Marion acting like the National League's best shortstop. General Manager Branch Rickey, of the Cardinals, touted Repass to his long-time friend, Clark Griffith, declaring he was doing Griffith a big favor. The Nats' owner took Rickey at his word and took Repass for the $7500.

He hit .317 in the American Association last year, but he wasn't that that league's top shortstop. That honor went to John Pasky, the Louisville shortstop who hit .325 and has ended up with the Boston Red Sox. But somehow when the American Association voted on an all-star team to play the league-leading Minneapolis Club in July, Repass, not Pasky, was the choice. That may mean sometning.

Not since Roger Peckinpaugh was helping the Nats to win pennants in 1924-25 has a Wasnington manager seen such shortstopping on his own club as Repass has been giving the team in exhibition games. The fellow doesn't run for a ground ball, he glides. The other day against the Dodgers, he actually made a play on the far side of second base and if he has a fielding weakness, it can't be discerned.

He Also Possesses a Good Arm

Three times thus far in the Nats' spring games, Repass has come up with ground balls missed by the Nats' third basemen. That was fielding by instinct, because his vision of the ball was obscured on each play. The first impression of the fellow is that he's a fancy-Dan, but that's a wrong steer. He's simply so graceful that he does everything with a flourish, seemingly without trying.

His arm is all right. Not as good as Travis', but again that commodity is very scarce indeed. Repass has made all the throws he has had to make. And Harris' troubles as far as a man to relay that ball from the outfield is concerned, are over. Repass will attend to that in the grand manner, unless he has been hoodwinking all of us in the Washington camp.

Want to know how he bats? Well, it's a long, fluent stroke that other guys would give plenty to own. That he batted .317 with Columbus was no accident, apparently. They don't consider him a power hitter, but he can be the outfielders' problem child. When left fielder Ducky Medwick played him too close the other day, he slugged a triple over Medwick's head. Repass is big enough to make 'em play back.

Well, there you have the guy, and as we were saying, he's a considerable package.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Brownsdale, N. Y., March 18.—Gray-haired, steely-eyed Bill Brown—the best conditioned septuagenarian in the country—believes that Jack Kelley's Office of Civilian Defense should erect hundreds of health farms from coast to coast, for the sake of a Nation going flabby.

CONSIDINE

The former wrestler, boxing promoter and referee, and currently one of the members of the New York State Athletic Commission, has been a foremost champion of physical education for 50 years. His health farm on the Hudson River, across from West Point, has reconditioned thousands of business men, professional men, athletes, public officials, clergymen and representatives of every other calling in life. He believes sincerely that the physical condition of the average American is a national disgrace.

We first heard about the routine at Brownsdale while in Honolulu, where lives one of Brown's most enthusiastic patrons. Up until the war, an Englishman on colonial duty in India made regular trips here to breathe, exercise, eat and relax his way back to health. A perennial client comes up from Panama. Hollywood sends overworked producers, directors and run-down actors. On the farm at the moment is a Spaniard with extensive business interests in South America. Also a younng professor of English who is building up his weight and muscles to make himself acceptable to the Army.

New Grip on Themselves

The variety is endless—the effect always the same. Men go away from here with a new grip on themselves, a new interest in life, a new appreciation of the way they have ben abusing their systems, and a general feeling of cleanliness for having lived for a time under the spell of Bill Brown.

We don't know anyone who takes the physical condition of his country as much to heart as blunt Bill. His overwhelming interest isn't purely academic, either. In his prime as a wrestler, 45 years ago, Bill weighed 175 pounds. Today he weighs between 165 and 170. He has a body better than most 20-year-olds. He lives cleanly, talks cleanly and those who come here do the same.

Thirty-five years ago, when he was getting this place started, and often since then, he has thrown out of camp all who broke the simple but unbendable rules of Brownsdale. Yet he's no martinet. He's one of the kindest men we ever met and certainly the fairest.

Bill was shocked when 50 per cent of the first crop of draftees were turned down for bad physical condition. It led him into new attacks on the easy life of modern youths, the misuse of the automobile, of tobacco and sweets. Never one to mince words, he said:

"I hate Hitler as much as the next fellow, but you've got to give him this: he turned a nation of pot-bellied, beer-swigging men into a nation of lean, hard athletes."

Wants Program Broadened

Bill still feels that we've got to adopt a little of that. He thinks Kelley is doing a fine job of stirring the drowsy liver of the average American, especially the defense worker, but Bill would like to see the program broadened.

"Take the ping-pong money and build hundreds of places like this, all over the country," he said today in his little office that looks down the clean hills of the Catskills. "Put responsible men in charge . . . Good physical education men, good rubbers, good men to lead hikes.

"We've got to get toughened up. We've got to get the poisons of gluttony and physical laziness out of our systems. We've got to be prepared individually as much as the country must be prepared as a whole. Do you suppose that if the nations were individuals that any of them would have picked on Joe Louis?"

The boys now in the Army will get plenty of exercise, from marching, calisthenics and organized games, Bill thinks. His concern primarily is the civilian.

"More Americans kill themselves eating than drinking themselves to death," Bill said. "It's a grave mistake to work hard all week and then play like mad for a few hours on the weekend. We should exercise a little each day, before breakfast.

We Burn Up Fuel

"We have too many conveniences. We can't burn up the fuel we take into our bodies at full dinner tables. You can kill a horse in a month by feeding him working rations, if you keep him in the barn.

"God put health within reach of all of us. Let's reach a little for it."

Bill's advice: If your work is sedentary, eat meat only once a day. Eat light breakfasts, stressing fruits and fruit juices. If you drink, drink in moderation, and the same is true of smoking. Develop willpower enough to go through a daily setting-up exercise. Walk more.

If you take his advice, Bill said, there won't be any more need for places like this.

Galle Is Formidable At Third; Manager Likes His Pitchers; Weather Erases Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 18.—Manager Bucky Harris of the Nats has no lust for power—he'd be satisfied with just a couple bona fide .300 hitters. In a lobby-sitting session today which followed the washout of the scheduled game with the Browns, Harris expressed satisfaction with all items concerning his Nats with the exception of their hitting.

"I'd like my club a whole lot if I were certain some of these fellows could hit .300," said Harris. "Definitely we're improved, and I'm willing to go along with the pitching, but we'll have a long haul unless we get some socking from our outfielders."

Harris was referring to the fact that none of his regular outfielders—George Case, Bruce Campbell or Stan Spence—were in the .300-hitting class last year and Spence's figure with the Red Sox was a weak .232. The club is already carrying one weak-hitting infielder in Second Baseman Frank Croucher, and the load on Harris' pitchers is obvious.

Estalella to Outfield

The Nats' manager already is mulling a new plan in an effort to bulwark the club's hitting. That plan calls for the restoration of Bobby Estalella to the outfield in the spot that shows the greatest batting weakness.

Estalella, for the past three weeks, has been tabbed as a third baseman. The squat little Cuban has power with the bat, and in the Nats' opening exhibition games he was doing a clever job of it at third base.

But the transition back to the outfield would be easy for Estalella, who is natively an outfielder.

The reason Harris may restore Estalella to the outfield is Stan Galle, the half-pint third baseman who has been doing very well at the job since Estalella was stricken with mumps. The rookie Galle has demonstrated that he can cover the ground and that his throwing arm is acceptable enough.

Galle Impressive

Lately Galle has impressed Harris with the idea that he can hit big league pitching. Against such pitchers as Spud Chandler and Atley Donald of the Yankees, and Harold Newhouser, of the Dodgers—fellows with stuff on the ball—Galle has not only been getting his hits, but he has been hitting to all fields.

Harris expects Mickey Vernon, Jake Early, Bruce Campbell and the Rookie Bob Repass to carry the batting load for the club. He has gone far out on the limb for Repass, who thus far has justified the belief that he will be a great ball player for the Nats.

The only three fixtures on the Washington pitching staff at this point are Sid Hudson, Dutch Leonard and Alex Carrasquel. Jack Wilson has been temporarily given the fourth starting job and if Wilson justified it Harris will be content with the club's pitching picture.

Others on Fringe

On the fringe of regular jobs on the staff are Walter Masterson, who is still troubled with control; Bill Kennedy, the only left-bander on the staff, and Phil McCullough, big right-hander from Greenville. McCullough is the most recent pet of Harris. The big fellow showed the Cardinals a knuckle ball at Daytona Beach the other day which had them missing by a foot.

Tomorrow the Giants come to Tinker Field for the Nats' last game of the week at home . . . Following that contest they move on to Miami for three games with the Giants and Phils . . . Jack Wilson, recovered from his spiked heel, is scheduled to pitch tomorrow, along with Sid Hudson and Carrasquel . . . Dutch Leonard, who reported late, may take the mound on the Miami trip . . . Bobby Estalella is still in the hospital with his bloated mumps . . . The Nats are still trying to dig up an infielder to swap to the Minneapolis club for Catcher Angelo Giuliani.

All-Star Court Teams to Play For Charities

By the Associated Press

New York, March 18.—A war charities basketball program, bringing together in one game the All-Metropolitan team and the All-Star team of the Invitation Tournament, was announced today for Madison Square Garden March 28.

The other game will match the ranking players of the Second Corps Area and a team to be announced. The Metropolitan All-Stars will be coached by Joe Brennan, of St. Francis, and the tournament five by the coach of the winning team. The entire proceeds, minus expenses, will go to war funds to be determined by the metropolitan intercollegiate committee, sponsor of the double-header.

The remaining two first-round games in the Invitation Tournament will be played tomorrow night with City College opposing Western Kentucky State in the opening contest and Rhode Island State matching its offensive against deliberate Toledo in the nightcap.

The winner of the City College-Western Kentucky game will go into Monday's semifinals against Creighton, surprise winner over West Texas State last night. The Rhode Island State-Toledo victor will tangle with West Virginia, which toppled Long Island University, last year's winner and favorite to repeat in an overtime session.

Washington Glovers Lose In New York

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 18.—The Nation's Capital ringmen fighting in the Eastern division of the Golden Gloves were ousted here tonight in the semifinals and finals before 16,000 Madison Square Garden fans after having qualified five for the semifinals.

Four of the Washington squad lost in the semifinals, and Red Vernon, colorful 147-pounder, was outpointed by Bennie Deans, of Newark, N. J. in the finals. Red lost after a close and exciting match.

In Finals Last Year

Vernon, the only veteran of the squad, last year went to the finals also, but in the lightweight division.

The Washingtonians, who had been the surprise of the tournament up through the quarter-finals, lost their opening bout of the semifinals when Chet Vinci, 18-year-old Rome, N. Y., schoolboy, gained the nod over Pete Celinski, St. Mary's Boys Club bantamweight. The New Yorker piled up a comfortable lead in the first two rounds and survived a third-round knockdown for his victory.

Lew Hanbury, highly touted Apollo Club youngster, was the second Washington entry to lose. Dedi Mathews, of Savannah, Ga., turned the trick. Hanbury was unable to solve Mathews' southpaw style. Both are featherweights.

Petro Stopped

Washington suffered its third consecutive loss when Charley Petro, of the fighting Petros, was stopped in the first round by Bob McQuillian, of Buffalo.

The Garden resounded with boos when the referee halted the lightweight match. Petro was floored just as the bell sounded ending the initial round. The referee wouldn't permit Petro to come out for the second round.

Frank Cady, of Charlotte Hall and Washington's heavyweight hope, was outpointed by Robert Ransey, of Huntington, W. Va.

In the semifinals, Vernon outpointed Salvatore Defini, of Jacksonville, Fla.

The Question Mark

Dodgers' Batting and Fielding Offset by Absence of Wyatt

Holdout of Mound Star May Cost 'Bums' Chance to Repeat in 1942 Race

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

Lakeland, Fla., March 18.—The Brooklyn Dodgers are more murderous at the bat this year than they were in winning the National League pennant and they are just as strong defensively—but right now they are pitifully nervous over the absence of Whitlow Wyatt, their ace pitcher.

This determined holdout by the league's leading hurler of 1941 might prove to be an important factor in this year's championship frolic, even though it eventually is settled. And unless Wyatt does agree to terms there are few hardy souls who would venture to say the Dodgers could repeat.

Wyatt won 22 games and lost 10 last year to help the Dodgers reach the World Series and he accounted for Brooklyn's only triumph in the post season classic with the Yankees. His performance was comparable, to say the least, to that of any pitcher in either major league.

For this effort he received the modest stipend of $11,500. For 1942 he asked $20,000 to put him in the same salary bracket as Paul Derringer, Bucky Walters and the other aces of the senior circuit.

May Give Ground

President Larry MacPhail countered with the argument that he had given Wyatt bonuses and raises in years when he had not earned them: that he had received a sizable increase for 1941 and should not expect an 88 per cent jump this year. MacPhail offered him $13,500 with a bonus of $1000 if the Dodgers had a normal attendance and an additional $1000 bonus if the club had a better than normal season.

Neither has budged and MacPhail has told newspapermen in Florida he would not compromise his offer and under no circumstances would trade his mound star. Wyatt has said he would remain on his farm near Chickamauga, Ga., unless his desires were met.

It is to be expected that both will yield a little ground as the season's opening encroaches on them. But Wyatt is 33 years old and needs time to get into condition for the

By the Associated Press

Chicago, March 18.—Johnny Kotz, star Wisconsin forward and leading individual scorer in the Western Conference basketball race, was awarded the W. G. N. Trophy tonight as the player of most value to his team during the 1941-42 season.

It marked the second successive year a Badger player received the award. Gene Englund having won the actual sized gold basketball trophy last season.

White to Referee Pro Court Series

Curly White, young Washington basketball official, yesterday was selected to referee the two games between the Washington Brewers of the American League and the Lichtman Bears, unbeaten local colored team, for the District Professional Champion at Turner's Arena Saturday night and Sunday afternoon.

White was given the call over some of the better known officials in the East, including Church Colodare and Matty Begovich, who have handled the American League games. Decision to select White came following a conference yesterday between Coach Mack Posnak, of the Brewers, and Manager Ewell Conway, of the Bears.

U. S. C. Signs Cravath as Head Coach

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, March 18.—Jeff Cravath, former coaching aid and football star at the University of Southern California and head grid mentor at San Francisco University last year, was signed today as head football coach at U. S. C.

Dr. Rufus B. Von Klein Smid, president of the school, announced the appointment of the 37-year-old Cravath to succeed Justin M. (Sam) Barry, who resigned several days ago to take a commission with the United States Navy.

No mention was made of Cravath's salary figure.

Unofficial reports were that he would receive $7000.

Cravath's San Francisco eleven was the highest scoring eleven on the West Coast last year. It won five and lost four games.

Cravath played for two years in 1925-26 under the late Howard Jones, served under him as an assistant coach, and was head mentor at Denver University from 1929 to 1931. He returned to U. S. C. and was freshman and later line coach from 1933 until 1940.

Great Lakes To Play 100 Ball Games

By International News Service

Chicago, March 18.—Mickey Cochrane, the former manager of the Detroit Tigers, will manage a team of sailors from the Great Lakes Naval Training Station through a 100-game schedule against college and minor and major league baseball teams, it was reported in Chicago tonight.

No confirmation of the report was forthcoming from officials at the naval training station.

However, facts tending to confirm the report include the application of "Black Mike" for a Navy commission, and the recent announcement by Admiral John Downes that the Great Lakes physical conditioning program is to be greatly expanded and paced by a "sudden death" football schedule this fall.

When Ted Williams, the Boston Red Sox' slugging outfielder, visited Chicago two weeks ago with a view to enlisting in the Navy, he was taken under the wing of Cochrane, who took him on a tour of the training station north of Chicago, indicating the former big league catching star knows his way around the station.

Big league baseball players wearing naval uniforms include such stars as Bobby Feller, of the Indians; Sam Chapman and Benny McCoy, of the Athletics, and Joe Grace, of the Browns, and while they are not at present stationed at Great Lakes, it was reported transfers would make them available to Cochrane.

Wyrostek was pinchhitting for Pitcher Dick Conger. Aldon Wilkie allowed the Bees but one bunt single in four frames, Jim Kerr permitted them none in two and Conger gave up three in three.

The Watch Surprises With Easy Victory in Tropical Feature

Joe Burger Second, Alforay Third as Favored Snow Whirl Shows Dull Effort

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 18.—The Watch, bred by Thomas Piatt, who also was the breeder of Alsab, surprised most of the fans here this afternoon when she easily defeated eight other juveniles in the featured Homestead Purse. The Epithet filly, a $650 yearling, registered by two lengths in the black and red silks of the Warbern Stables, nom de course of Maj. Albert Warner, the movie magnate. The winner, now victorious in two of her four starts, paid $22.90 and sped the half mile in 48 flat.

Mrs. Louis Lazare's Joe Burger had no trouble beating A. C. Ernst's Alforay by three lengths for the place. Mrs. C. S. Bromley's Snow Swirl, second to Bullpen in a stake at Hialeah, finished eighth in the role of favorite. She dropped back after breaking well.

Has Earned $1600

By picking up $750 in purse money today, The Watch boosted her earnings to $1600.

Alforay broke like a bullet from the inside. Joe Burger was hot on the trail, however, and took command around the big curve leading to the stretch. The Watch was rated not far behind by Billie Thompson, while Snow Swirl, fifth straight beaten choice of the day, could not keep up.

The Watch collared Joe Burger near the sixteenth pole and romped into the clear as if much the best. Alforay easily defeated the others.

Tropical Officials Ban W. J. Taylor Horses for Meeting

By the Associated Press

Tropical Park, Fla., March 18.—The stewards today ordered that the entries of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Taylor be refused for the balance of the meeting. Their ruling stated: "W. J. Taylor is denied the privileges of Tropical Park, and we recommend that he be indefinitely suspended by the Florida State Racing Commission." The stewards merely gave as a reason "for conduct detrimental to the best interests of racing."

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al:

The race tracks and turf fans are getting a chance to help the war effort. The Navy needs binoculars of the type used at tracks to keep a line on the horses. Owners, trainers, handicappers and customers are being asked to loan their glasses to the sailors. New York officials already have established an office and are providing messenger service for collecting in the Gotham area. When peace comes, efforts will be made to return the glasses to their owners. I'm told that during World War No. 1 more than 50,000 binoculars were turned over to the Navy and all but one glass was returned. It is expected that the Maryland tracks will have a central point for donating glasses as soon as the season gets under. Because the Navy is not allowed to accept them as gifts, $1 will be paid to each person. Russ Hodges, who conducts the WOL sportspage in homey fashion, is suffering from Bowie-itis. Unlike some radio fellows who blurt about horses and know little or nothing about them, Hodges is a pretty fair handicapper and has a keen knowledge of the sport. If you tune in after April 1 and hear a strange voice in the afternoon, just make a wager that Hodges is on the rail, even as you and I. Saturday's $7500 Coral Gables Handicap won't afford the fans a chance to compare the $50,000 Widener field. The Rhymer, winner of the half a hundred grand, will stay in his stall due to cut legs suffered in his bold stretch move, while Market Wise will be on the shelf for some time as the result of leg injuries. Alsab, of course, won't go. The favorite probably will be the C. S. Howard entry of Mioland and Porter's Cap. Our Boots will draw plenty of play, however, as will the Circle M Ranch entry of Get Off and Sir Marlboro.

BILL.

First race—FELSWAY looks to be in a fair way of getting out of the maiden ranks in this event. Packs speed and should make the most of the rail post position. BOLO TIE should be a keen factor. BOSTONITE for the show end.

Second race—TIBERIUS appears nicely placed in this field and I'm going to string along. GOLD MESH is tossed in with feather weight and is dangerous. FOREFEND belongs somewhere in the money circle.

Third race—COMMIXION gets my call in this field. Don Meade will do the riding and I see no reason for mistakes. BURNT BRIDGES is a fair sort and will be close. TRIMMED for a piece of the cash.

Fourth race—BATTER UP may be the best of the 3-year-olds gathered for this test. Needs only to run to his best race. DAY BY DAY has speed and is a threat. TETE A TETE to fill out the pay-off bracket.

Fifth race—ONE JEST seems to have found conditions that suit in this distance test. Needs only some help from the saddle. YANKEE PARTY is formidable and due respect. KINGFISHER to take care of the others.

Sixth race — INCOMING and MORE THAN FEW are a tight fit in this event. I prefer them in the order named. WOOD ROBIN is at tops now and will be in the thick of contention.

Seventh race — BUFFLEHEAD (named for Art Brown) may take this gang into camp. HASTY WIRE likes the route and is ready for the best. DISSENSION SIR is an upset possibility.

Eighth race — SINGING HEELS needs only to run back to that last to take care of these. LEONARDTOWN gets in light and is dangerous. WISE HOBBY for the minor money.

Best bet—ONE JEST.

Army Champion Awaits Kenner Fight Here

Lucky Strike Bowlers Win Three Games

The stalwart Lucky Strike team, last year's champs in the Men's District League, again showed their mettle last night by a valiant three-game win over Roger Peacock's Bethesdans to take over first place by virtue of pinfall when the Rosslyn Racers, erstwhile leaders, dropped all three to the Ice Palace.

George Linkins' 424 and Jack Perrell's 401 led the Ice Palace to a sweep over the Rosslyn boys for which Stalcup's 391 led.

The charging Arcadians scored a sweep over Del Ray's Cavaliers to jump from fourth place to a tie in games won and lost with Lucky Strike, one of the most magnificent feats of the season for only six short weeks ago they were barely in the first division. Fred Murphy and his boys have won 17 out of the last 21 games, a record of which to be proud.

Hi-Skor dropped to fourth by losing two to Hyattsville, and Georgetown, Arlington and Convention Hall follow in the order named.

2 Promising Local Bouts Are Brewing

It may happen, or it may not, but it's something boxing fans can think about—a couple of local "naturals" that may spring from Monday night's show at Turner's Arena featuring Jabbo Kenner, the 220-pound Washington colored giant, and Marty Clark, the 200-pound Army champion from Fort Hamilton, N. Y.

Joe Turner, the promoter, announced yesterday that Gus Mirman, the former Columbus U. and Jewish Community Center boxing star, who fights Otis Harris in a six-rounder, has challenged Steve Mamakos, the Golden Greek.

Mirman, who is doing a comeback, recently beat Powerhouse Johnson at the Arena, and his handler, Murray Kanner, also a fighter, told Turner that Gus would be ready for Mamakos after he has had a few more matches under his belt.

Negotiations for a Mamakos-Mirman bout will be started this week, Turner said. It would probably be held at the ball park. Mirman weighs 165 and Mamakos around 162. The Greek hasn't had a fight in a long time.

It also developed yesterday that Turner expects to stretch his bankroll to the hilt to try and make a Kenner-Jimmy DeChard or Clark DeChard bout for the ball park. Frankie Mann already has flatly turned down the offer for Kenner to fight DeChard, but it is possible that Mann might take DeChard against the Army champion. It all depends on how the bout comes. Kenner has won his last two by knockouts, is getting stronger all the time. Clark has an enviable record having beaten Maynard Daniels, Jack Marshall, Henry Cooper, Hard Rock Harden and others.

Of interest on the Monday show are the eight-round semiwindup between Carl Guggino, of Hartford, and Abie Kauffman, of Philly, and the six between Chief Petty Officer Bill Duffy, of Gene Tunney's Physical Training School at Anacostia, and Sammy Daniels, of Baltimore.

Regular Yankees' Outfield Ready

New York, March 18 (AP).—Manager Joe McCarthy today announced that Outfielders Joe DiMaggio and Charlie Keller will be at their respective regular positions in center and left against the world champions' Kansas City farm at Lake Wales tomorrow.

Tommy Henrich will be moved to rightfield, thus giving the Yanks the outfield line-up that is expected to start the regular season. Today's game with the Reds at Tampa was canceled because of weather conditions.

Holdout Wyatt Serious Blow To Dodgers

campaign. Every day he is delayed now may be reflected in the record later.

As long as Wyatt is out of the fold the entire pitching picture is clouded. Kirby Higbe, who also won 22 games for Brooklyn last season has just succeeded in working a kink out of his arm in the last few days after getting a late start in training.

Manager Leo Durocher is counting heavily on three rookies—Right-hander Ed Head and Southpaws Bob Chipman and Chet Kehn—but to date none of them has looked outstanding. Head is fast, Kehn has curves and Chipman is clever, yet each needs a little more than he has shown.

Fred Fitzsimmons, Curt Davis and Johnny Allen are veterans useful for spot assignments and for relief, along with Hugh Casey and Newt Kimball—but merely from the enumeration of the hurling staff it can readily be seen that the pitching situation is anything but secure.

Army May Get Padgett

Offsetting this uncertainty is the increased power that Brooklyn has obtained in Arky Vaughan and John Rizzo, both of whom have looked fine in spring games. Apparently Don Padgett is headed for the Army, but last year's outfield looks competent.

Vaughan has dispelled any doubt about his ability to play third base and the big bat which has produced averages between .300 and .385 for ten consecutive years is sure to blend well with the rhythm of Pete Reiser, Dolph Camilli, Joe Medwick and Dixie Walker.

Tebell to Run As Governor Of Rotaries

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., March 18.—Gus Tebell, baseball and basketball coach at the University of Virginia, will be presented as a candidate for district governor at the conference of District 187, Rotary International, in Richmond next month, District Governor Branch Spalding announced here today in his monthly Rotary letter.

Tebell is past president of the Charlottesville Club. Ammon G. Dunton, attorney of White Stone and past president of the Kilmarnock-Irvington-White Stone Rotary Club and an alumnus of the University of Virginia, will also be a candidate for governor, Spalding, secretary of the alumni fund at the university, said.

The district conference is scheduled April 22 and 23 at Richmond, with nominations for district governor set for the opening session on the afternoon of April 22.

Tebell served as a lieutenant in the United States Army in the first World War. He entered the University of Wisconsin, where he was graduated with honors in 1923. He achieved recognition as an All-American football end, and was awarded the Big Ten medal for scholarship and athletic prowess.

After graduation from the University of Wisconsin, Tebell coached football, basketball and baseball at the University of North Carolina. He joined the University of Virginia faculty as coach of basketball and baseball in 1930. He has been a Rotarian since 1933.

Dunton, a native of the Northern Neck, was educated in Lancaster County public schools and received the LL.B. degree from the University of Virginia law school in 1927. He is active in business and civic life of White Stone, and has been a Rotarian since 1934.

Vicki Croggins Rolls 399 Set, Brookland Wins

Vicki Croggins missed the charmed 400 circle by only a single stick last night as her 399 for Brookland paced the team to a 2 to 1 triumph over Arcadia in the Ladies' District League action.

Rosslyn regained the lead with a 2 to 1 triuph over Del Ray as Stimmie Hart's 365 led King Pin to a shutout victory over Ice Palace, which was deadlocked for first place.

Dot Gude's 368 was the big count in Clarendon's 2 to 1 win over Arlington, as Ruth McClintic had 355 for the losers. Mabelle Hering posted a 378 for Spillway in an odd game decision over Red Circle while Lafayette also took the decision over Rendezvous by a like margin.

Pitcher Phil Hurt Key to Navy's Baseball Hopes, Says Coach

Max Bishop Hopes Star Is in Shape

If Hurler's Arm Still Ails, He'll Be Taken To Doctor; Big Squad Ready to Go Outdoors

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., March 18.—"We ought to have a right nice ball club," Max Bishop, Navy's baseball coach and former big league infielder, said today as he awaited a break in the weather to stage outdoor practice.

"If Phil Hurt is available," he added, "our ball club will be fully as strong as last year when we had some good boys. But it will be a blow if we lose him."

Hurt, a pitcher who developed a sore arm last summer, is still ailing. Bishop said he would take the twirler to a doctor.

The Middies, who won 14 games and lost 5 last year, will be without the services of Norm Smith, ace pitcher; Wes Gebert, third baseman; Don Blue, shortstop; Sherry Werner, first baseman; Hal Harwood, left fielder, and E. P. Smith, center fielder, all of whom were graduated.

Returning Veterans

Veterans back are Lefty Lavrakas, catcher; Capt. Jackie Stowe, second baseman; Jackie Brennen, right fielder, and Pitchers Lou Luberda and Hurt.

Navy's pitching corps also includes Las Lasater, a senior; Lefty Casey, Jack Davis, a southpaw, and Bill Leahy, a right-hander. Davis hurled good ball for last year's plebes. Casey, a hard hitter, may be shifted to the outfield.

Bishop is counting on Jake Ruppert, 1941 utility infielder, to play the hot corner. G. W. Watson, a sophomore, is another third base candidate. W. J. McNamara is out for shortstop and Schettino for second base.

The Tar mentor may move McNamara to first base and use Schettino, who is powerful with the willow, at shortstop. Fritz Hansen, a senior, and Larry From are candidates for the initial sack. Ted Snyder will be Lavraka's understudy behind the plate.

In addition to Brennen, Bishop has other outfielders in Irish Higgins and Gillis, a sophomore. Higgins may play leftfield and Casey might be transferred from pitching duties to centerfield.

Navy's pitchers and catchers have been working out in the Naval Academy armory since late February. Bishop hopes to take his squad outdoors tomorrow because the first game is but ten days off.

The schedule:
March 28, Dartmouth.
April 1, Harvard; 3, Cornell; 4, Vermont; 8, Rutgers; 11, Pennsylvania; 14, Baltimore Orioles (practice game); 15, Michigan; 18, West Virginia; 22, Maryland; 25, North Carolina; 29, Penn State.
May 2, William and Mary; 6, Gettysburg; 9, Virginia; 13, Temple; 16, Columbia, away.
Navy also will play Georgetown and Army, but the date will be announced later.

The Horse Show Season Hereabouts Can't Be Far Away—It Isn't

Washington and nearby horse enthusiasts are getting ready for the annual battle of ribbons scheduled to open on March 29 with the Chevy Chase Horse Show. This event will be staged on the show grounds on the East-West Highway in nearby Maryland. Mrs. Dorothy Smith, riding St. Nick, is shown taking a jump yesterday. Awaiting her turn at the left is Eileen St. John Smith aboard Lady. You're right, the scene is Rock Creek Park

Chicago 'Y' Rallies to Win A.A.U. Thriller

Denver, March 18 (AP).—One of the finest rallies of the current national A. A. U. basketball tournament gave the Chicago Y Clippers a surprising 39-34 victory over Chemical City Athletic Club of Midland, Mich., in the third round today.

The tourney's first one-point decision turned in favor of San Francisco Athletic Club in a tingling 56-55 success against Dallas Peppers, the only Texas team in the thirty-fifth renewal of the country's biggest cage circus.

Another of the seven West Coast quintets reaching today's third round, the Los Angeles Cliftons, had too much power and reserve strength for the plucky Ouachita College team from Arkadelphia, Ark.

The Arkansas youngsters were the only collegiate outfit traveling this far, but they couldn't travel fast enough after a bitterly fought first half, and the Cliftons won, 67 to 37.

The Chicagoans, national Y. M. C. A. champions last year, were behind, 30-16, in the second half, seemingly hopelessly licked, when they began finding the range, at the same time blunting the Midland team's offense.

Big Ed Bogdanski, former DePaul University star, pumped two goals that tied the score at 33-33, then Clipper Killian got loose for a sleeper goal, putting Chicago ahead, 35-33, with three minutes left. Chicago's scoring was concentrated among four players, with Bogdanski and Kardzionak making 15 each.

Hollywood Twentieth Century's defending champions scored an easier third-round victory over Allen Bradley, of Milwaukee, than the score, 59-53, make it sound.

The big Californians coasted along on a big lead through most of the second half and Wisconsin's solitary representative didn't cut into it sharply until Hollywood had cleaned its bench of substitutes.

Pastor Offered $20,000 to Fight Bobo in Pittsburgh

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, March 18.—Bob Pastor tonight was offered $20,000 to open this steel city's outdoor boxing season by meeting Harry Bobo, local Negro heavyweight slugger, Promoter Jake Mintz announced.

Mintz, acting in behalf of the Rooney-McGinley promotional enterprises, said he had wired the offer to Jimmy Johnston, Pastor's veteran New York manager. The contest would be contingent upon Bobo's success in his March 30 encounter here with Lem Franklin, Cleveland Negro, Mintz said.

The Pittsburgh promoter suggested May 23 as a date.

Brandt Released

San Bernardino, Calif., March 18. Pitcher Bill Brandt was released on option by the Pittsburgh Pirates today to Toronto of the International League. Brandt won 15 and lost 8 for Harrisburg last season, and lost the only game he pitched for the Pirates.

Four Ohio State Coaches Accepted By Naval Air Corps

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, March 18.—Four Ohio State University athletic coaches, including Coach Paul Brown's three freshmen football tutors, have been accepted by the Navy as physical education instructors in the United States Naval Air Corps.

The four are Larry Snyder, track coach; Eddie Blickle, football assistant and freshman basketball coach; Trevor Rees, freshman grid mentor, and Fritz Heisler, his aide.

They passed their physical examinations today and were ordered to report at Annapolis Monday for further assignments.

The coaches were interviewed in Cincinnati March 1 by Maj. Bernie Bierman and Lieut. Comdr. Tom Hamilton.

Snyder will receive a lieutenant commander's commission and probably will be assigned as first assistant to Bierman at the Naval pre-flight training school at the University of Iowa. Rees, Blickle and Heisler were commissioned lieutenants. Their stations have not been announced. The coaches have leaves of absence from the university.

Louis Takes Easy Workout; Pilot Watches

By the Associated Press

Fort Dix, N. J., March 18.—Manager John Roxborough watched Joe Louis go through his training stunts today for the first time since the heavyweight champion started work for his title bout with Abe Simon in Madison Square Garden March 27, and was pleased with what he saw.

Roxborough declared Louis was in fine shape, both physically and mentally. Joe went six rounds against four spar mates, although there was nothing sensational about his work.

"It was our practice day," explained Joe. "We don't fight every day."

The champion weighed 210 pounds at the end of the workout, but still has a week to get down to the 206 he hopes to scale at weighing-in time.

Manager Johnston In Chipper Mood

Eagles Lose, 9-6, in Play-off To Johnstown

Special Dispatch to The Post

Johnstown, Pa., March 18.—The Washington Eagles came from behind to tie the score at 6-6 but the Johnstown Blue Birds matched their spurt with three goals to win, 9-6, in an United States Amateur Hockey Association play-off match here tonight. Washington trailed 6-4 at one time in the game.

The defeat snapped Washington's two-match play-off winning streak. The Eagles had won consecutive shutouts, over Johnstown, 3-0, Friday, and Boston's Olympics, 4-0, last night. Red MacKenzie's team, 1940-41 champions of the Eastern Amateur League, have not won a match on this tiny rink all season.

The Blue Birds drove in three goals in the last seven minutes for victory. Winning goal was Coombs' score at 13:39 off a pass by McCartney.

Eagles to Battle Rovers Tomorow

Their two-match winning streak having collapsed at the hands of their nemesis, Johnstown, the Washington Eagles return to Riverside Stadium tomorrow night needing a victory over the New York Rovers to remain in a contending position for the United States Amateur Hockey Association championship series.

Olympics Win, Tie For Hockey League

Boston, March 18 (AP).—The Boston Olympics blasted the Atlantic City Sea Gulls for a 9-to-5 victory tonight to enter a triple tie for the Eastern Amateur Hockey League's top place.

The finale left the Olympics tied with the New York Rovers and Johnstown's Blue Birds with a play-off ahead to settle pennant honors.

Dartmouth Wins Eastern Crown

Philadelphia, March 18 (AP).—Staving off three Princeton threats, Dartmouth won its fifth consecutive Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball League championship tonight by beating the Tigers, 46 to 38, in a play-off before 6000 at the University of Pennsylvania Palestra.

The teams had finished the league season tied with ten victories against two defeats.

Sparked by Bob Xayers, of Wyoming, Ohio; George Munroe, of Joliet, Ill., and Jim Olsen, of Lombard, Ill., the Big Green always came through with the necessary basket whenever the Tigers grew dangerous.

Ernie Dusek, Sonnenberg Meet Tonight

Two of the big names in wrestledom, "Dynamite Gus" Sonnenberg, the former champion, and Ernie Dusek, of Nebraska, nicknamed the uncrowned titleholder, will clash in tonight's feature match at Turner's Arena, a one-hour time limit brawl.

In three matches locally Dynamite Gus has handled himself creditably, having mowed down Fred Grobmeier, Art DeGland and Stanley Pinto, all by the flying tackle.

Dusek has dropped but three matches locally in the last five years. Last week Dusek won from Cowboy Luttrall, the Texas wildman, and in two previous bouts the Nebraskan whipped Gino Garibaldi twice.

It will be Dusek's deadly dropkick against Sonnenberg's flying tackle.

Luttrell also is on the card, meeting Sheriff Tom Hanley, the 320-pound Oklahoma blimp, in the semi-windup. The Sheriff drew with Tom Manley last week.

That mysterious figure, The Shadow, whose real name is Marvin Westerberg, will make his bow, facing Leo Nume, the handsome Pacific Coast grappler, in a special bout. Other matches show Joe Cox against Milo Steinborn, and Al Norcus against Maurice LeChappelle.

The change in starting time sends the first two into action at 9 p. m. instead of 8:45.

Tigers Win One

Lakeland, Fla., March 18 (AP).—Detroit's Tigers, who lost their first five exhibition games, pulled out of the slump today with a 6-5 triumph over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Although they notched 13 hits off Ed Head and Hugh Casey, the Tigers had to come from behind with a two-run rally in the last of the ninth for the victory. A pass to Rog Cramer and singles by Barney McCosky, Pinky Higgins and Bob Patrick produced the tying and winning runs off Casey.

Buck Newsom Holdout Seen Nearing End

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., March 18.—Louis Norman (Buck) Newsom, sporting three chins and an expansive midriff, engaged in his first workout at the Detroit Tigers' training camp today and indicated his holdout campaign may be drawing to a close.

Old Bo-Bo slipped quietly into Lakeland last night and registered at the same hotel where General Manager Jack Zeller is staying.

The recalcitrant pitcher conferred with Zeller today and was told that the club positively wouldn't budge from its original offer—something he already had been told by telegram, telephone and letter.

"He said he wanted to think things over," Zeller said.

What Buck was offered wasn't divulged, but it was learned there is a bonus clause in the contract.

Zeller emphasized that Newsom wouldn't be paid a quarter in salary until Manager Del Baker believes he is in physical condition to pitch.

MacMitchell Races Dodds March 25 for Navy Relief

By the Associated Press

New York, March 18.—Leslie MacMitchell, New York University senior, and Gil Dodds, Boston divinity student, will give an encore of their two sensational mile duels in the Navy Relief track meet on the nine-lap coliseum track, March 25.

Dodds won the A. A. U. national championship from MacMitchell in 4:06.7 and MacMitchell reversed the decision in the Knights of Columbus games last Saturday, winning in 4:08 after Dodds ran the first quarter in 58.1 and the half in 1:59.7.

The committee, originally, had proposed a special handicap mile for MacMitchell with Dodds matching strides against Greg Rice in the 2-mile event. Before meeting MacMitchell again, Dodds will run at Chicago Friday and Kansas City Monday.

The Navy Relief meet will be limited to six events—mile, 2 miles, 440 and 880 yards, and the 1-mile and 2-mile relays.

Awards Urged For Civilians' War Efforts

Awards for distinguished civilian service in war work were suggested last night by Holgar J. Johnson, president of the Institute of Life Insurance.

MR. JOHNSON

"Outstanding performances by civilians in war work, while necessarily less spectacular than those of our armed forces, merit special recognition and honor by the Nation," Mr. Johnson declared in an address before the Washington Chapter of the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters at the Hotel 2400.

More than 120 persons heard the address, including members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association. Presiding were T. Loehl O'Brien, president of the underwriters' association, and J. Allan Maphis president of the Chartered Life Underwriters' chapter.

"It is a mistake to assume that our armed forces alone can successfully undertake an offensive on the scale required unless they are supported by a civilian offensive on the home front."

He added that reliance on defensive measures in war is a "snare and delusion," and that if every civilian added a 'plus for patriotism' by putting forth extra effort then he as an individual is taking the offensive against the "brutalitarians."

"This plus for patriotism," he said, "means a more intensified effort in an individual's regular work beyond the normal requirements; it means a willingness for volunteer war work; it demands conserving materials needed in the war effort . . . it demands participating in community action to accomplish every necessary project."

New Division To Simplify War Designs

By the Associated Press

New York, March 18.—Formation of a new division of the War Production Board to speed the use of simplified and standardized designs in the war production program will be announced shortly at Washington, it was learned today.

Howard Coonley will take leave from his duties as chairman of the board of the Walworth Co., big manufacturers of valves and fittings, to head the new division.

Coonley, a former head of the National Association of Manufacturers, and a former president of the American Standards Association, is regarded by industrial technicians as one of the countrys leading authorities in the standards field.

The new division, a branch of WPB's bureau of industrial conservation, is expected to act as supervisory and coordinating agency for all the standards work now being done by the WPB, the OPA, War and Navy departments, the Maritime Commision and the Government's Bureau of Standards. It is expected also to operate in close relationship with civilian technical societies as the American Standards Association and the American Society for Testing Materials.

Formation of the new agency, industrial experts here pointed out, is in line with the policy of Donald M. Nelson, WPB chief, himself long interested in standardization as a method of speeding production, saving materials and labor, and holding down costs. As an operating official of Sears Roebuck & Co., Nelson was an active member of the American Standards Association.

During the last war, Coonley was administrative vice president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and a member of the War Labor Policies Board. The other two members of the latter body were Franklin D. Roosevelt and Felix Frankfurter.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 18 (AP).—A decline of more than 3 cents in rye prices during the final hour paced the downward course of bread cereal prices in the grain market today, but principal feeds, corn and oats, held about steady.

Stop loss selling, which was unusually active in lowering prices because of the thin market and top-heavy volume of outstanding contracts ensulfed the rye pit and prices tumbled as much as 3¾ cents to the lowest point since early in the year before liquidation was exhausted and short covering started a rally. This upset wheat, which had held steady most of the time.

U. S. Steel Nets $10.45 a Share In 12 Months

By the Associated Press

New York, March 18.—United States Steel Corporation finished all defense and lease-lend orders in 1941 substantially on schedule and direct and indirect orders of this sort are currently accounting for more than three-fourths of the corporation's shipments, Irving S. Olds, chairman, said in his annual report today.

The booklet, which contained amongs other things pictures of bomb-making machinery at work, bore on its face the so-far unusual legend:

"This report has been reviewed by the Army, Navy and United States Office of Censorship."

Shipments Up 33 Per Cent

Some of the high lights revealed by this key producer of war materials included:

Shipments of rolled and finished steel in 1941 topped 20 million net tons, a record, and an increase of more than a third over 1940.

The $1,623,000,000 received during the year for goods and services sold was a record, though higher taxes, costs of materials and labor, and unchanged price schedules left net income of $116,171,075, or $10.45 a common share, 40 per cent below the previous high sales volume year, 1929. Profits compared with $102,211,282 or $8.84 a share in 1940.

Average hourly wage rates, and the average annual wage payment to employes were peaks in the corporation's history, as was the number of persons employed, which averaged 304,000 for the year. Workers employed have increased 51 per cent since 1938, and the annual payroll, which was $601,117,053 last year, has risen 113 per cent since 1938.

7 Per Cent Return on Assets

Of the 1941 net income, Olds said: "After income taxes and all charges except interest on funded debt, it amounted to 7.02 per cent, as compared with 6.99 per cent in 1940, of the value of the net assets, the latter being the total assets, less current liabilities. The average return for the five-yar period 1937-41, on this basis, was 4.59 per cent, while for the ten-year period 1932-41, which included the deficit years of 1932, 1933, 1934 and 1938, the average return was equivalent to 1.85 per cent of the net assets."

Before discussing the corporation's war output, Olds said:

"In the interest of national security, this report has been reviewed by Army, Navy and other Government officials, with the result that certain detailed information regarding properties, capacity, production, shipments and related matters has been omitted or modified in accordance with the Code of Wartime Practices, and the suggestions of the United States Government Office of Censorship."

War Products Listed

In addition to the launching of "a number" of cruisers, destroyers, cargo boats and tankers, Olds listed other war products of the corporation as ship and tank armor plate, shell steel, shell forgings, unloaded shells and bombs.

He also said nearly one-third of the Nation's output of tar, ammonium sulphate benzol and toluol, as well as substantial quantities of tar acids, were byproducts of the corporation's coking operations. The chemicals, with a wide variety of uses, are largely employed in making explosives and fertilizers.

Leading Issues Close Fractionally Lower On Profit-Taking Induced by 2-Day Advance

New York, March 18.—Profit selling today halted the stock market advance registered in the two preceding sessions.

Buyers on the rise apparently were too strongly tempted to resist the cumulative average gain of around a point between Monday and today's opening and there was a rather poor offset in new demand. In the leaders closing prices were fractions to around a point lower.

Speculative circles, cheered by Gen. MacArthur's arrival in Australia, had more good tidings in a Washington communique describing severe naval losses for Japan as a result of American-Australian air attacks but the news had little effect on the price trend.

Other incidents which received attention were President Roosevelt's declaration against any immediate change in the 40-hour week and existing principles of overtime pay. Discussion on the coming tax program was enlivened by reports that Westinghouse Electric had made charges against earnings for the first two months this year on the basis of the Morgenthau proposals and found net profit for the period was 78 cents a share on the common stock against $1.38 in the same time last year.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite recorded a dip of .3 of a point at 35.0. Transactions amounted to 335,780 shares against 500,860 Tuesday.

International Harvester fell 2⅞ points as plans were made for the public sale of 250,000 shares out of the McCormick holdings.

Closing lower were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, United Aircraft, Douglas, Sears Roebuck, Chrysler, Westinghouse, Dow Chemical, Dupont, Union Carbide and Standard Oil (N. J.). Rubbers were fairly steady.

Postal Telegraph and Western Union made a little progress to the accompaniment of Washington reports that a bill for their merger was being drawn.

Bonds and commodities were irregular. Chicago wheat closed ½ to ¾ of a cent a bushel in arrears and corn was unchanged to ⅝ lower. Hogs were 10 to 15 cents lower. Cotton futures had final gains of 5 cents a bale.

Off in a heavy curb were American Cyanamid, Gulf Oil and Brewster Aero. Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Driver Harris moved ahead. Dealings here were about 76,000 shares against 65,000 the previous day.

Mexico to Receive Idle U. S. Furnace

Goltra said a furnace of this sort, ready for production, would be worth about $2,000,000. It has daily capacity of 350 tons of pig iron.

Bill Aims at Spurring Explorations for Mines

Legislation to promote mineral development, with a view to making more raw materials available for the war effort, was introduced this week by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming.

The bill would permit the Secretary of the Interior to make studies and surveys for minerals and power sites. It would authorize a $2,500,000 appropriation for such explorations during the current fiscal year.

The Senator said the measure was suggested by Secretary Ickes, who last month issued a comprehensive program for such development.

Tire and Fuel Outlook Drops Used Car Sales

By the Associated Press

Detroit, March 18.—The supply of used automobiles still is greater than the demand.

Contrary to the expectations of most retailers, the period of rigid limitation on new car sales thus far has brought no scramble to buy the traded-in models still available under the governmental rationing program.

Major deterrent to used car sales right now, the trade experts explain, is the virtual impossibility of obtaining tire replacements and indications of further restrictions on gasoline consumption. "For those who buy on the deferred payment plan," said one authority, "this raises some question as to whether they may not be forced to take their cars out of service before they have been paid for."

Even 1941 Models Lag

There are a considerable number of 1941 model passenger vehicles among those offered by retailers—most of them with good tires. Generally these models are the dealers' show window cars.

"Immediate delivery" is being promised on these units, but before selling them, the average car retailer is thoroughly investigating his prospective customer's eligibility for a new car under the rationing restrictions. If he has a chance to qualify for a rationing board certificate to buy a new vehicle, the dealers is prepared to help him get it. The movement of new cars, according to recent surveys, has been even slower than was indicated by the governmental authorization for the distribution of 140,000 of the 1942 models by the end of May.

Dealers' Outlook Cloudy

All things considered, the dealers' chances of making even overhead expenses on the combination of used car sales and service operations right now appear to be anything but bright. Had the restrictive measures been limited to discontinuing the production of new vehicles the dealers probably would have been able to figure on at least a measure of profit from the sale of used units and from repairs and maintenance.

Now a goodly proportion of the Nation's 40,000 car retailers are thinking of war work as a source of income to keep them going through the war emergency. Probably the first formal step in that direction was the incorporation in Michigan recently of an organization known as the "Automobile Dealers Defense Service, Inc., organized by a group of Detroit Chrysler retailers. Its objective is described as "to provide, advise and assist automobile dealers for manufacturing or processing of munitions of war."

Further Drop Noted In East's Supplies

New York, March 18 (AP).—A further drop in supplies on the East Coast and a decrease of nearly one-half million barrels in crude oil production was reported by the American Petroleum Institute today in its weekly review.

Stocks of finished and unfinished gasoline on the East Coast stood at 18,043 000 barrels in the week ended March 14, against 18,408,000 in the preceding week. Stocks of residual fuel oil totaled 6,292,000 compared with 6,976,000 a week earlier.

East Suffering As Oil Piles Up In Southwest

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Okla., March 18.—The oil industry in the Middle and Southwest is one defense effort suffering from overproduction.

This paradoxical situation has been brought about, executives said, by the same transportation situation which is forcing rationing of gasoline in 17 Eastern States, the District of Columbia, Washington and Oregon, beginning tomorrow.

Crude and refined stocks are piling up in Oklahoma, Kansas, Texas and other States. In Group 3, tank car prices of gasoline are off a half cent a gallon because of the tight tank car situation.

Output Cut Planned

Production is being choked back, with Texas planning to reduce April takings about 200,000 barrels daily. Other middle plains producing States have been affected, although less drastically.

While the Eastern States face the prospect of getting along on 20 per cent less gasoline, oil men here say that the Group 3 retailers are feeling the pinch of low prices and less driving due to conservation of tires.

Market men suggested that in any event the reduction in volume, either forced or voluntary, would result in higher gasoline prices to consumers.

Price Rise Expected

"The ordinary filling station operator will be selling fewer gallons a month," one explained, "so, he'll have to make more money on each gallon in order to stay in business."

As a general rule, oil executives of the larger producing States feel that little would be gained by rationing consumers close to adequote gasoline supplies.

Such rationing, they said, should be undertaken only if

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Mom's saving sugar, Pop's fussing over his tires, sis is hoarding her silk stockings—everybody in the family's doing war work but me!"

Listen! with Glynn

It will be script No. 3849 which you will hear Amos 'n' Andy putting on over WJSV and the Columbia network at 7 tonight.

Which is a fine, inverted, statistical way of telling you that tonight Amos 'n' Andy are celebrating their fourteenth anniversary on the air.

It was on March 19, 1928, that two young men named Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll stepped before a microphone at Station WMAQ in Chicago and read a script marked "Amos 'n' Andy, Episode No. 1."

The microphone then looked a little like an alarm clock trapped in a spider web—but it brought to listeners' minds a picture of a somewhat spindly but sagacious little fellow named Amos, who ran the Fresh Air Taxicab Service, and a bombastic windbag called Andy, who talked of millions of dollars casually, while borrowing dimes from his much-put-upon partner.

Between Episode No. 1 and Episode No. 3849, the world has speeded up to 400-mile-an-hour airplanes, markets have crashed and nations have been blotted off the face of the earth. But Amos has remained Amos and Andy still is promoting his big money in grandiose style.

In those 14 years Gosden and Correll have been the voices of approximately 550 different characters in their mythical Harlem and so expert have been their vocal delineations that millions of people instantly can identify such characters as the Kingfish, Lightnin', Henry Van Porter and Brother Crawford.

And they're still going as strong as ever.

Contract Bridge

This question concerns your play of today's hand. You are sitting South, declarer at a three-notrump contract, and West opens the four of hearts. Small heart is played from dummy and East puts on the ace. How would you handle your cards from this point? The solution is presented below.

Today's Hand

SOUTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ 975 ♡ J 10 3 ◇ 9 7 6 ♣ A 7 6 2
WEST: ♠ Q 8 4 ♡ Q 8 7 4 ◇ 8 5 4 ♣ J 9 8
EAST: ♠ J 10 6 3 ♡ A 6 ◇ K 3 2 ♣ Q 10 5
SOUTH: ♠ A K 2 ♡ K 9 3 ◇ A Q J 10 ♣ K 4 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT.	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 NT.	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 4 ♡.

The Solution

Declarer makes his three notrump contract by developing an extra card entry in dummy so that he can take two diamond finesses. He can count eight probable winners—two spades, one heart, three diamonds and two clubs. The game-going trick may be won if East holds the diamond king, singly guarded, in which case declarer will be able to lead from the board and finesse for it.

South realizes that if East holds the king doubly guarded a second finesse will be necessary, but that dummy has only one entry card, the club ace. When East plays the heart ace on the opening lead, however, declarer sees a chance to uncover a hidden entry. He throws his good king of hearts under the ace, and North's jack or ten then becomes a winner.

Declarer is thus able to enter the board twice for the necessary diamond finesses, and succeeds in taking four tricks in the suit for game.

Note that if he plays a small heart, instead of the king on the first trick, he is unable to enter dummy with a heart, as West plays the queen when declarer leads his only other small heart. Those players who follow suit immediately on the opening hand are likely to hold on to the king and go down one trick.

'Stranger' Gets $1000 in Holdup

A "stranger in Washington" got away with $1000 after holding up a collection truck of the High ice cream stores about noon yesterday.

"I'm new at this job," the man told Melvin Wines, 25, 318 Ninth Street Northeast, who was driving the truck, Wines reported to police.

Wines said the man joined him as he came out of the High store at 2624 Fourteenth Street Northwest having previously picked up receipts from eight other stores.

"Drive up the street," said the man, who waved a heavy automatic. He wore thick-lensed spectacles and was quite nervous, Wines said. Three times the man told Wines to stop and turn over the money but each time changed his order because a car drove up. Finally he made Wines stop at Nineteenth Street and Mintwood Place Northwest.

Urged on by a wave of the revolver, Wines said he drove away, leaving his passenger on the corner with the money bag under his coat.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Waterfront Dive — BY MILTON CANIFF

...TANK TO ARMY AIRPLANES! WE ARE AMERICANS! ...IF YOU HEAR ME, WIGGLE YOUR WINGS!
WHAT KIND OF BUSINESS IS THIS? FIRST A JAP TANK BREAKS OUT AN AMERICAN FLAG —THEN I PICK UP A VOICE SPEAKING ENGLISH...
...CAPTAIN! THOSE PEOPLE HUDDLED NEAR THE TANK WERE NOT SOLDIERS... IT'S THAT REFUGEE CROWD THE COLONEL SAID WAS IN THIS AREA...
MAYBE THEY'VE CAPTURED A TANK AND ARE TRYING TO RUSH THOSE BARGES!
AS THE AMERICAN AIRPLANES CIRCLE TOWARD THE WATERFRONT...
BEHOLD! THE AIRPLANES THAT RAIDED OUR AIR FIELD!...
BEHOLD, AS WELL, ONE OF OUR IRON MONSTERS — HERDING THOSE PRISONERS! TOGETHER, WE SHALL BEAT OFF THE BIRDMEN!

MARY HAS CHANCED UPON THIS TELL-TALE LEAFLET IN COLONEL CANFIELD'S SHABBY LUGGAGE!
SO... THAT'S WHAT HE IS? A COMMON GAMBLER!
NOT SO COMMON, THOUGH, AT THAT! AND HE WAS EVEN HANDSOMER THEN... POOR FELLOW! I WONDER IF HE INTENDED FOR ME TO FIND THIS?
HERE'S YOUR RAZOR, COLONEL! I... I'LL GO GET YOU SOME HOT WATER!

MICKEY FINN — Au Revoir! — BY LANK LEONARD

WE'D BETTER GET ON BOARD, KITTY— WELL, MICKEY— GOOD LUCK!
GOOD LUCK TO YOU, MR. KING!
G-GOODBY— DARLING!
NOT GOODBY, KITTY— JUST— —SO LONG!
WE MAY MEET— SOONER THAN YOU THINK!

MR. AND MRS. — A Voice Crying in the Night — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL and ELLISON HOOVER

HUH? WHAT?
SOMETHING MUST BE THE MATTER. I CAN HEAR THE CAT CRYING DOWNSTAIRS
